LAW VS. LAWLESSNESS.

The issue between law and lawlessness has given information concerning the unscrupulous business men interested would kill him.
Then there is, or has been, still another class of citizens throughout the county—a class who are not in sympathy with the lawless element, nor do they have any fear of them, but they are what might be termed un-concerned citizens. The blockade business, they say, is not bothering them, and so long as they personally are not bothered they will not bother the other fellow, and so it has gone on from bad to worse.
But the time has come in Johnston and in Johnston county is being clearly drawn. For some time there has been an element of lawlessness and a spirit of law defiance prevailing in many sections of the county, and this lawless element has had the sympathy of many who themselves were not violators of the law, but who, because of sympathy, would shield and cloak those who were violators. Then there has been another element of our population who were afraid of the lawless crowd, and while personally they were opposed to the illegal acts of their neighbors they were afraid to openly oppose, or prosecute them. This feeling of fear has been and is still widespread throughout the county. Only a few days ago a good citizen and a wide-awake farmer told me that he knew of the location of a blockade stall, but when I asked if he would go with the officers and me to get the thing that he said was causing the trouble in his community, and getting a hold on his boy, he would not promise to do so, and said that should it be known that he county when no citizen can say that the lawlessness is no concern of his. In fact the time has come when the man who is not outspoken in his opposition and who is not only outspoken but who is willing to break up the hellish business in our midst is going to be looked upon with suspicion by all good citizens.

The killing of a Johnston county officer and good citizen is a dastardly defiance of law by one of a mob of law-defying, cowardly cut-throats, who are as mean, cowardly, dirty and devilish, as the meanest of leaders of Bolshevism in Europe, has opened the eyes of all good thinking men in Johnston county and no longer can any good citizen say that the lawlessness of the county is none of his business. The spirit manifested by this lawless crowd is exactly the same spirit that is playing a more terrible havoc with parts of Europe than was caused by the war—the same spirit that is now threatening to destroy what is left of civilization in that country and is making it next to impossible for the peace conference in Paris to establish anything approaching a real and permanent peace for the world, and unless an end is put to this lawlessness in our midst the peace and safety of our own nation, State and county will quickly crumble and Bolshevism or anarchy will destroy the civilization of our own fair land.

If the daying of Sheriff Wall will cause the people of Johnston county to realize the peril that has been so long lifting its head in our midst then he will not have died in vain, but it is a terrible price to pay for our carelessness and indifference to this monster evil. If this does not teach us the lesson and cause the good citizens of the county to arise in their might and put an end to the blind tigers, then this is only the beginning of the end and other deeds as dastardly and devilish will come from this defect in our civilization.—Selma Johnstonian.

Science has made war unutterably destructive and would make the next one annihilating. To escape the destruction of civilization, there must be no more war. The League of Nations points the pathway to peace; such a league is a compact against war.
