Seeking A Secretary.

Dunn's Chamber of Commerce desires a secretary. A committee has been appointed to employ one.

Nevertheless, the committee has been instructed to employ a man one who has "plenty of pep and the requisite bull."

The Dispatch fears the directors are about to make an error—one that possibly will strike the organization a serious blow.

With the coal strike at least temporarily off the way it looks as if the local power plant will be able to furnish current without interruption throughout the winter.

Along with indorsement of the proposal to sell the municipal power plant to the Southern Power Company The Dispatch gratuitously advises the changing of Dunn's present system of government.

A Year of Peace and Other Things.

A year has passed since a certain degree of peace settled over the nation. For us who reside in the only wholly American section of the country it has been a wonderfully prosperous and agreeable era since the following guns were silenced.

In the meantime, however, the North and West have not been so fortunate. There where Uncle Sam had sown to the wind through his cost plus system on a larger scale than was attempted in any part of the South except along Hampton.

During the war this writer was employed by newspapers in different parts of the country to expose methods of the government contractor.

so appalling that even the publications that paid for the making would not publish them for fear of so disrupting the morale of soldiers and civilians that victory would be endangered.

With the signing of the armistice, however, the flow of government money was, to a degree, checked. Men who had been paid merely to allow their names on the pay roll and to sign the necessary slips were turned away.

WHY THE SWINDLER DIDN'T APPEAR

It is impossible to say in just how many ways a local farmers' organization can be helpful to its members. Here is one example.

In the writer's county a company of farmers operate a warehouse. In charge of this warehouse as directors are some level-headed farmers with good business judgment, who have also retained a good local lawyer as their attorney. Into this community recently came some agents selling stock in a Florida soft phosphate mining company, and making all kinds of promises to prospective investors. The farmers in this community said to the agent, "Well, we should like to have the combined judgment of our best men about your proposition. We will get our board of directors to meet at such and such an hour, together with your attorney, and you may come before them and tell them your proposition. Then if after their investigation they think it safe and wise for us to invest our money with you, we will do so." The agent, of course, had to agree that this was a fair enough proposition and promised to meet the directors. But when the appointed time for the meeting came, he was nowhere to be found. He had slipped on to other pastures where farmers were more gullible and less well organized!

Just now when the woods are full of swindling, stock-selling agents, this sort of cooperation might be practiced to advantage in almost any county in the South.—The Progressive Farmer.

There is no idle time for an industrious farmer. It is one continual round of work, from January to December. When the crop is gathered and the long cold nights of winter have come it is the breaking of the day of next year; it is time to clean up the orchard, spray and prune, plant trees, set out strawberries, get out stumps, terrace land, repair farm tools and implements, repair fencing and farm buildings, repair gear and harness, give all livestock the very best care and attention.—The Progressive Farmer.

Blessed is he with a sense of humor, and doubly blessed is he who can laugh at himself when there is no one else around to laugh at.
