filled when the market is permitted to vacate that must and will be to settle down to normal conditions. In considering these figures, we are dealing with the present, not with the past. The "upset" due in a large part to the scares of holders which have reacted upon consumers, unsettling both ends of the line, cannot be otherwise than temporary and will hardly affect the year's consumption as a whole. The mills are quite as anxious as the producers for the resumption of normal functions. The remedy lies with the Southern producer and holder, who should be quite able to cope with the situation.

The retail trade, which is the real foundation, is, we are told by the best authorities, proceeding on a nearly normal basis so far as volume is concerned.

Must Restore Confidence

"Confidence must be restored from the producers' end. The wave of buying or for the replenishment for them selves waits only a knowledge that the room is at the top and not at the bottom.

"There is nothing the matter with the South beyond an unreasoning scare in cotton. Our institutions are solid, our banks are in splendid condition, better than ever known, and they have been made so by the people's money, resultant from the prosperity of the past few years. Their interests are the people's interests, and we need not be forced to seek outside of our own-section for the solving of our problems. The world wants our cotton, the like of which cannot be obtained elsewhere. The world must supply its need from our supply and a people who would throw overboard their products at less than cost under existing conditions would class nothing short of "dynamite."

"We are not and have never been that kind."

SOUTH WILL RAISE TWELVE MILLION BALES

handkerchiefs, bed sheets, and dress goods and so on, will find that he pays from three to ten dollars a pound for his cotton when he buys it back.

There is the strongest holding movement on in the South in its history. The farmers are simply fighting for their rights, and if they win and sell their cotton for 20 cents as against 20, they will save one billion two hundred million; if they sell at 20 cents the bear speculators will take all the profit.

To the business men and farmers of Alabama: Which side are you on? Senator Cawley, who has led over two hundred thousand dollars to farmers with which to hold their cotton, says, "Tell the farmers to hold their cotton till the cows come home." Are there not hundreds of other patriotic citizens throughout the South who will also find the cotton farmer money so he can receive at least the cost of production for his cotton?"

M. C. ALLEGRO, Commissioner of Agriculture, Alabama.

THE FARM BOY

It has come to be recognized with recent years that the world is largely dependent upon the farmer for its living. Concrete and steel, produced from the earth, may build great structures to house us; wool from the backs of sheep may clothe us; but the farmer alone can feed us.

Along with this realization came the knowledge that the farm boy was turning toward the city in greatly increasing numbers, and that there threatened a great shortage of men qualified to carry on the business of agriculture on the proper basis. The agricultural colleges have done much to offset this by pointing the way to real scientific farming and therefore to real profit for the farmer. But despite this fact a large number of farm boys, even those who had an agricultural college education, were turning toward the city as soon as they came of age.

One thing more than any other lay at the bottom of this trouble, and that was the difference between living conditions in the city and on the farm. City life meant shorter work hours with complete leisure when the day's work was done. It meant freedom from cares. It meant the material comforts of living such as running water and electric lights in the home. Unquestionably these things, coupled with natural ambition and a desire to realize the business possibilities of farming, led many farm boys to seek their futures in the city rather than on the farm.

A new agency has risen, however, to overcome this tendency. It is the new modernly equipped farm home. With the development of the farm electric plant, bright electric light and a bath room are enjoyed on the farm just as readily as in the city. Electric power too has done away with the drudgery of chores. It pumps the water, milks the cows, does the separating and churning and lots of other work that used to fall to the lot of the farm boy.

This new servant can be expected to work wonders in the way of keeping the farm boy on the course for which he is best fitted.

HARDING'S ROOSEVELTISM

What is strange is that the friends and relatives of Theodore Roosevelt should campaign for a candidate who eight years ago used these words about their former leader:

"He has betrayed and broken with the friends who have given him loyal and unselfish devotion for years. He has abandoned the principles which he advocated with voice and pen ever since he entered public life. He has deserted and attempted to destroy the party which honored him. He has convicted himself of insincerity, inconsistency, ingratitude and untruthfulness. He has shamed his past and disgraced his future."—Senator Harding in 1912.

What is both strange and unpardonable is that some progressive independent groups in the Republican party should not only submit to such leadership, but actively attempt to fasten that leadership on the country.

HIS DEFINITE STAND

"I do not want to clarify those objections. I want to turn my back on them. It is not interpretation but rejection I am seeking."—Senator Harding.

REFUSE TO SANCTION STATE-MNET

Washington, Oct. 21.—The United Lutheran Church of America, in second biennial convention here today, refused to sanction the declaration last night of the Rev. E. F. Bachman of Philadelphia that the treaty of Versailles should be modified.

It Hauls the Big Load Year After Year

When you buy a wagon, you naturally expect it to last for many years. The style you purchase—that is, the tread, will from now on determine to a great extent how much service you will get.

Since automobiles have become common, more "wide-track" wagons break axles and wheels than any other type of wagon. The automobile passes over practically all roads more frequently than wagons. On soft stretches its wheels cut a well-defined track—always 56 inches wide.

That's one reason why our standard "auto-track" John Deere wagon with 56" tread will last longer than any wider track wagon. The wheels of the John Deere wagon run along easily in the broad, smooth, well-made paths made by the automobile wheels.

The horses have an easier pull, the wagon runs smoother and there are no excessive strains to cause breakage.

The wider track wagon does not fit this "auto-track," but bumps along endeavoring to make its own track. Heavily loaded wagons slip off the ridge into the rut, twisting the wheels and straining the axles. Breakage often results.

The John Deere auto-track wagon will carry a bigger load of cotton bales because you can lay the first tier of bales across the bed, the top bales lengthwise.

Come in and let us show you other advantages from using this wagon. Be sure to ask us about the John Deere Wagon Guarantee.

Carload in all sizes and weights just received and now ready for delivery.
