Another sailor was nabbed by the local police this week while in the attempt to travel to his station via the locomotive tender route. He is in the local crib awaiting the arrival of about $30. If this does not arrive soon he will be sent to the roads and be forced to stand a trial by court martial when he returns to his ship.

A large part of the subscribers to the local telephone exchange awoke to find themselves telephoneless yesterday. Manager Nobles had discontinued service to all who had not paid Saturday. This is a rule he will follow strictly in future. He is not permitted to continue service if dues are not paid by the twentieth of each month.

There are several sailors and soldiers on the county roads at this time. Their crimes is that they hadn't sufficient money to get them to their ships and camps after spending a few days with the home folk. Most of them are likeable young fellows. It would not be a bad idea for the community to carry a little cheer to them on Christmas Day. A good Christmas dinner would do them a world of good.

Otis P. Shell, who has been engaged in special work for the census bureau of the Federal government through the eastern counties of the State, completed his work last week and has returned home. HOSPITAL IS NEAR ITS COMPLETION

"Central Harnett Hospital" is to be the name of Lillington's new institution for the relief of the sick. The hospital is almost completed.

Drs. J. W. Halford and N. C. Riddle, the founders, are rapidly making preparations to open doors for the reception of patients. Painters, plumbers, etc., are on the edge of the finishing touches, furniture and fixtures are being placed, and already the institution is taking on that inviting look which characterizes such places.

Most people, of course, do not think of a hospital as being inviting, but there's the drawing card. There is a certain air of comfort which reassures the patient on first entering—a feeling of confidence that "here will I live where else I might die."

An operating room has been fitted up with the most modern equipment and annex for sterilizing work. This department will be up-to-date in every respect, and patients may have the best surgeons to be secured for any case. Drs. Halford and Riddle will not limit the capacity of the institution to their own individual skill, but will invite the best surgical skill to be found and will consult patients in that respect. Most people are peculiar when it comes to a question as to who shall "operate" them. This question will be answered by the patient's own wishes.

The hospital will be modernly equipped and comfortably furnished throughout. A heating plant will be installed, hot and cold water running in the building, with electricity and other modern conveniences added. A ward has been fitted up in the rear for colored patients.

The institution will fill a longfelt need for this immediate section, in that it will not now be necessary for patients to take chances on a long and fatiguing journey to another city—avoiding a long trip will in a great many instances save a life.—Harnett County News.

The Japanese walnut offers possibilities for landowners who are seeking to plant nut trees for shade or other purposes, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. It is nearly as hard as the black walnut and is by no means uncommon in Northern and Eastern States, where it is especially appropriate for farm and deer-park planting. For the present, seedling trees will have to be relied upon almost entirely, as very few budded or grafted trees are available.
