to press any person with unnecessary severity; in fact, the contrary appears to be true. But the Association realizes, that deferment of financial obligations is often too easy. Moreover, the small amount of any consequence to the creditor, is often more likely to be deferred than the large one. And yet many creditors suffer serious embarrassment at times just because an accumulation of small accounts have not received the prompt attention of those who owe them.

With the Franklin fix 'em quick man there went into service of the nation to save the world to liberty and to his sons. But and Mann Both are sleeping in the hills on the slopes of hills in Piedmont. Still in all the months Brother Holmes has resided here never a mention of this has come from his lips to us. You—all o' fus—might see him some time in uniform when the American Legion meets to do honor to some departed brother. You might think then that here is some brother who did service in a swivel chair. But not so. The war was brought home to Brother Holmes as it has been brought home to few of us. He offered his life, it was not taken. Instead the fix 'em quick man of his home were made to show more brightly. He grieves silently. We honor him above all who came with our nation in the daily grid.

All of you know, of course, our friend Charley, He... You know that he is the man's 'reel' of being (his fish years are always true and are to be received with relish by all lovers of truth. Well, the other day, he told a whopper to our equally esteemed friend Holmes, of the Franklin Fix 'em quick shoe repairing establishment. Friend Holmes is a very quaint and quiet customer. Seldom is it that he smiles at all, you know.

Charley was regaling Holmes with a yarn about the big fish he had caught in the out-of-the-way places that you and I never see. "And that fish was as long as my arm," Charley averred as an conclusion to his yarn. "That ain't nuthin'," said Holmes. "Up near Franklinton, which is in Franklin county, you know, where I come from," he continued, "there is a farmer who owned the most remarkable cow in existence. About four years ago this cow swallowed an Elgin watch. Last year the cow was butchered. The watch was found in her stomach and was still running. It had lost only fifteen minutes in the more than three years since the cow swallowed it."

"How in the world," Charley asked, "did the watch keep running all that time?" The cow's chewing of her cud kept the watch wound, Mr. Holmes replied. Then Charley retired to his accustomed calm.

Speaking of this fellow Holmes, by the way, reminds us that he is one of Dunn's most remarkable men. He is a veteran for three wars—the Spanish American, the Phillipine and the German. He still carries scars of a wound he received while storming the heights of El Caney in Cuba. When the North Carolina national guard was mustered into service for duty on the Mexican Border he was top sergeant in the Franklinton Guards. Then he was close upon—well we won't say how many years. He went to the border and when the fellows returned for overseas service he stuck.

The body will be taken to Latta, S. C., for burial, Sunday. He was 60 years old and leaves a widow.

PAY IF YOU CAN

If every person who is able to meet his obligations promptly and in full should do so, incalculable benefit would inure to the whole community. The Merchants' Association will render a very substantial service to Wilmington, if, as a result of its plans formulated Monday night, there should develop a more general understanding of the necessity of paying bills. We do not understand from the published accounts of the Association's meeting, that there is any disposition of low middling and below worth $1.25 more than heretofore in addition to the advance in the market. Dispatches from the National Capital this week report that Congress has passed a bill authorizing the use of billion dollars to assist in handling agricultural exports. Peace has also been made with Germany, and we seem to be getting closer to better times. It is now up to the farmer, the banker, the buyer and the warehouseman to market his cotton slowly, as this seems to be the best way to sustain prices and bring about a further advance.
