

COTTON GROWER CAN FINANCE HIS CROP'S SALE NOW

Organization Of Cooperative Marketing Associations Makes Advances Possible

MEMBERS WILL HAVE NO TROUBLE BORROWING

Dr. Kilgore Gives Interesting Detailed Study of Cooperative Associations in Raleigh News and Observer—Believes From Financial Standpoint Nothing Like Plan.

By B. W. KILGORE

Better methods for marketing of farm crops is the outstanding matter of interest to the farming and business public today, not only in North Carolina but all over the country.

In certain states in this country, and in other countries, have been formed for the marketing of farm crops greatly to the advantage of the producers and the public.

These associations have had no very serious difficulties in financing their members after their products were sold, or in securing loans for making advances to the growers.

Other Northwestern States (Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho) and States in other parts of the country (Florida, Michigan and Wisconsin) have had cooperative marketing associations for their staple products.

The method of financing has usually been to borrow from State banks to the extent of their financial ability directly, and through rediscounting with the Federal Reserve banks.
