Self Raising Flour

Self-raising flour is nothing more nor less than a high grade of plain flour, plus refined acid phosphate, ordinary baking sods, and dry table salt—substantially the same chemical properties as appear in the usual baking powder formula. The Marshal's welcome began a hundred miles out at sea. There the liner Paris, bearing him to the New World, was joined by twelve American destroyers. For a time the war craft had it all to themselves, but soon through the mist broke a squadron of sesplanes. The Marshal raised his head at the familiar sound of southering maters overhead.

other notables.

But the series of receptions had hardly begun. The next came off Fort Jay when guns thundered a general's salute. And then the climax.

Landing a few yards from Castle Garden, where his famous countrymen LaFayette had set foot on American soil, the Marshal found awaiting him a reception that even his
