Old Maids Convention Pleases Large Crowd

It has been many moons since a more delightful convention has been held in Dunn than that of the old maids of the town in the opera house last evening. The convention was attended by many besides those whose age and singleness entitled them to membership and the proceedings of the occasion were such that to see and hear them meant that one must forget the cares and worries of life for the time being.

Each of the twenty-five people taking part (they were not all old maids) played the part of one who had reached the stage of anxiousness for a husband—a stage in life when the prospects are beginning to darken. The convention lasted only about one hour, but that hour was one of rich entertainment for those present. Each member of the cast of characters deserves special mention, but time and space forbid. Anyway, it was some convention and was well worth the price of admission.

The entertainment was staged for the benefit of the organ fund of the Christian church and the door receipts totalled approximately $100.

Negress Gets Dunn Mixed With Florence

It happened in Dunn. Yesterday as A. C. L. train No. 89 was pulling out from the local station a lady of color was heard to inquire what time the train left for Columbia S. C. She was advised that the train had just left the station. It then developed that the negress had gotten off the train here, thinking that she was in Florence. She stated that the conductor had told her to change in Florence, though she did not state who told her that Dunn was Florence. Bewildered is no name for the expression which played itself upon the face of the damsel of color when she learned what she had done and was advised that the next local train for Florence would arrive here at 7:45 this morning. "I'll have to get a place to stay," she said as she took one last look at "her train" which she had so recently abandoned.

Wright, teacher of science and athletic instructor in the Clinton high school, came to Dunn yesterday and made arrangements for giving the concert here. BIG CAST WITH RAY IN "R. S. V. P."

Charles Ray's drill genius to burlesque characters is again evidenced in "R. S. V. P.," his First National production which will start a run at the Colonial Theatre next week.

This time the star appears as an artist of much ambition, but little success, who is impoverished because he declines to leave his wealthy relatives support him. Jean Calhoun makes her bow as tending lady for the star and proves an attractive person, just suited to Ray's style of acting. Harry Myers, who had a prominent role in "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," appears as Ray's chum, Benny Fielding. William Courtwright is shown in one of the character roles for which his name has become famous in screen circles.

Rob Wagner, gifted writer of original scenarios, has provided the star with a story that offers more than the usual opportunity for comedy touches. The roughshod path of art leads the two youths to a fancy affair in the town's swell set and right into the home of Ray's girl.
