A KIND WORD.

How little it costs if we give it a thought,
To make happy some heart each day,
Just one kind word, or a tender smile,
As we go on our daily way.

Perhaps a look will suffice to clear
The frown from a neighbor's face,
And the press of a hand in sympathy,
A sorrowful tear efface.

It costs so little I wonder why,
We give so little thought,
A smile, kind words, a glance, a touch,
What magic with them is wrought.

JAMES E. WEST PAYS VISIT TO ASHEVILLE.

Chief Scout Executive Met at South Carolina by Patrol and Escorted to City.

James E. West, of New York City, chief executive of the national organization of Boy Scouts of America, spent several hours in Asheville Sunday, during which time he was shown over the city and at 12:30 he was tendered luncheon at the Kenilworth Inn. The luncheon was an 11 course affair, the serving so arranged by Manager Roscoe Mervelf that ample time was given for discussions and talks, so that immediately afterwards the chief executive and his party would be enabled to resume their journey which is being made by automobile.

The party came in from Greenville and departed for Knoxville Sunday afternoon. The party was met at the South Carolina line by a patrol of boy scouts from Hendersonville, who escorted the party to Asheville and here turned over to the local scout organization, headed by A. W. Allen, Boy Scout executive for Western North Carolina.

The luncheon was attended by a large number of business men interested in the Scout movement and its success. Nearly all of the members of the district council, and Captain Allen, were at the luncheon. District council members are as follows: H. W. Plummer, Verne Rhodes, Rev. J. B. Thrash, S. A. Hubbard, Judge Cameron E. McRae, Wythe M. Peyton, Morris Lipinsky, Fred Kent, P. M. Burdette, Carl Bamford, J. M. Geary, W. F. Duncan, R. E. Currence, all of Asheville and B. S. Colburn of Biltmore Forest, and R. C. Crowell of Candler.

Mr. F. A. Stall, local scout master, with the following boys motored to Asheville to see Mr. West: Johnnie Johnson, Huel and Douglas Patterson, Jimmie Atkins, James Rose and Rose and Charles Russell.

HAUL OUR MANURE ON DRY DAYS.

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 22.—Either haul out the manure and spread thinly on the fields planted to small grain or let it stay in the stables where it is packed down. Don't pile it out in a corner of the lot where it loses all of its nitrogen as ammonia gas which escapes into the air.

"Any time during winter, when the ground is dry enough, is a good time to spread manure on small grain," says E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College. "This is better than to pile the manure outside of the barn. When piled loosely and exposed to weather, the manure is always damaged by certain bacteria which change the nitrogen to ammonia gas and this escapes into the air. Much of the value of the manure is thus lost. Leaching also plays a part in this loss of fertility."

Mr. Blair states that when manure is spread out on the field, there is too little in one place for the destructive bacteria to become active. Rains will leach out the nitrogen, but it is carried into the soil where it is so badly needed.

From the standpoint of the growing crop, the spreading of manure in winter is an excellent practice, states Mr. Blair. Even a light application will form a blanket that protects the young plants from cold. The value of the manure as a source of nitrogen is well known, but there is another point which should be remembered—if clover is to be sowed on the grain the following spring, manure applied in winter will neutralize some of the acids in the soil making it a better place for the clover. This feature is especially valuable on land not limed. In fact, Mr. Blair states that manure acts somewhat like lime and its use has enabled many farmers to grow clover on land where it wouldn't catch before the manure was applied.

"If it is not convenient to haul out the manure to the field, by all means let it remain in the stable where it will be kept packed down," recommends Mr. Blair.

The Vegetarian

SOME people, apparently, were intended to be vegetarians. Now does not agree with them, and they should not eat it. It is a mistake, however, they believe—because vegetables are a less concentrated food or because of their medicinal properties.

To keep such people satisfied with a vegetarian diet, it is essential to serve some of the vegetables crisped and browned, or in leaves and croquettes as appetizing as meats.

As spinach and string beans contain iron and furnish iron with without being at all fattening, they are useful in any diet, and especially so in that of the vegetarian.

They may be served as meat substitutes. For instance, when looking a casserole of spinach and tomatoes, but a layer of spinach just under the cheese layer, or make spinach croquettes, be sure to thoroughly wash the spinach, and chop, well drained spinach, with two hard-boiled eggs,

Mrs. Prospect,
Doubtful Avenue,
Wonderville

Dear Madam:

Last week a customer came to see if we could match some things she had bought from out of town.

She was doubly surprised; first, that we had the exact same thing; second our price was lower than the people who sent the catalog.

So many people seem to think that if a big city sends out a catalog everything in it must be a bargain.

Some others seem to think it can't be bought here in town. Now we don't carry as much as the bigger city stores do, but we usually have a good assortment of most of the things they carry. And often we save you money.

Next time suppose you shop around with us. We are glad to help.

Yours truly,

D. M. Simons

"Cabbages and Kings"

THERE have been many conjectures as to what was contained in the bowl of old King Cole. Some say wine and others think not. In all probability, it was sauerkraut. For the effect of sauerkraut on the disposition is very similar to that of the contents of the bowl of the king. He is clearly described as "a merry old soul." To be merry, one must be healthy, and there is no food more conducive to health than sauerkraut. Its natural lactic acid cleanses and disinfects the digestive tract from impurities and toxins. Scientists place it among the most valuable of preventive and corrective foods. Sauerkraut is cabbage in its most easily digested form. It may well be considered the family tonic. And, now that it comes in cans, sauerkraut is conveniently accessible to everyone. Moreover, in this form, its cleanliness is assured, since the commercially preserved product is packed with all sanitary precautions. The old-fashioned way of having the grocer dip it out of a barrel left much to be desired.

The regulation method of serving sauerkraut may be pleasantly varied by combining it with other foods. Delicious salads may be made by mixing canned sauerkraut with chopped apples and celery; with canned pineapple or grapefruit, marshmallows and nuts; or with hard-boiled eggs and stuffed olives.

And here is a recipe for Sauerkraut Chop Suey.—Boil 2 cups rice in salted water and drain. Melt 4½ tablespoons butter and add rice. Cook three minutes. Add one can tomato soup, one medium size can sauerkraut, 2½ cups cold chicken, veal or pork, 2½ cups stock, and cook five minutes.
