

'NEW LIGHT DUPLICATES DAY-LIGHT'

Kelley's Studio at Waynesville, N. C. has installed one of the new Perkins "HI-POWER" Twin Arc White Flame Photographic Lamps manufactured by The Photogenic Co., Youngstown, Ohio. This lamp burns special carbons and produces a snow white light ranging from a very low to an extremely high volume. It is powerful enough to make motion pictures or snap shots of babies and is unexcelled for big groups. The light is a pleasing soft white color duplicating daylight perfectly and making it possible to easily distinguish all colors in their true tones. It imparts a healthy color to the person being photographed which is a great improvement over the ghastly appearance which some of the artificial photographic lights produce. There is no blinding flash but a steady soft cool light which is very pleasing to the eye and comfortable to sit under. With this light Mr. Kelley the Photographer says, "Our studio will be absolutely independent of daylight and we can make high quality photographs Rain or Shine day or night." With the installation of this lamp the Kelley studio is making good in their determination to use only the best equipment available.
