Pecan Twig Girdler Damaging Nut Crop

Owners of Pecan trees or groves are reported that twigs are being cut from their trees in alarming numbers and in some instances small branches with nuts upon them are falling to the ground.

"This trouble is caused by the pecan twig girdler," says C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at State College. "We have had requests for information about this pest from all parts of the State. The damage is caused by a beetle with long horns. Only the female cuts the twigs. These females lay their eggs beneath the bark near a bud-scar or next to an off-shoot about the time the twigs are cut. Usually the eggs are placed on the main branch in numbers ranging from 3 to 40. The twig then breaks from the tree at the first wind and falls to the ground. The egg stage of the insect lasts about three weeks and the larvae or grub grow very little during winter. The next spring, however, growth begins in earnest and the grubs feed in this twig and mature as adult beetles late in the season."

About the only way to control the pest is to pick up the cut branches in the fall and winter and burn them. Mr. Brannon says the owner should get those out of the trees as well as the ones on the ground. This will prevent the grubs from maturing to attack the trees next season. No other effective control methods is known.

If neighbors would cooperate in burning the fallen twigs more effective control would be secured in each community where pecans are grown on a large scale, the specialist declared.

EVERY MAN IS ENTITLED A JOB SAYS DANIELS

By JOSEPHUS DANIELS

Has every man the inalienable right to work? And if so, who is to give them all jobs?

There is but one thing that is uppermost in the minds of the American people today. No matter where you go, or in what company you happen to be in, whether in the office of the captains of industry or in the company of men looking for jobs, the unemployment question looms so large that all other questions are dwarfed.

THE BUY NOW SLOGAN

Every manufacturer and every merchant, and every farmer as well, feels the effect of unemployment of over five million men. We may cry "Buy Now" until all the boosters and optimists are red in the face, but with five million men denied the usual weekly pay check, where is the money to come from? The "Buy Now" slogan is as empty as a tinkling sycamore when pocketbooks are empty. The peach crop, the apple crop, the potato crop, the wheat and cotton and other crops are abundant. People have appetites for all that is produced, but growers cannot sell at living prices because many people who would be glad to buy cannot find the money. Those who are at work, or many of them, have had their pay cut down, and they cannot buy as much as they would like. When people have steady work and regular pay they need no "Buy Now" slogan. In such times the slogan they should heed is "Lay Up Something for a Rainy Day," but as few would listen to that admonition as can be persuaded to buy an umbrella when the sun is shining.

LOOKING FOR WORK

"I want a job," is the only request that five million people are making, "so I can support my family." It seems a reasonable desire. Except for a brief period, it is a brand new desire. Ordinarily men can pick and choose what character of work they prefer and pass on the conditions of employment and the pay. Remember 1918-19 when jobs were so good that employers sent out agents to secure enough workers? Today such a condition would look like Paradise to the man who vainly looks for work. To be sure, there are always some men who do not want to work, but they are so few in number as to be negligible.

THE RIGHT TO A JOB

Even since 1776 when Jefferson declared that every man had the inalienable right of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," and later declared that no man should take from the mouth of labor the bread it had earned, there have usually been plenty of jobs to go around. Therefore, the question of the inalienable right to a job has rarely been presented, or if presented at all was necessary to answer whether a man had the inalienable right to work. But now William Green, head of the American Federation of Labor, declares that there must be added a new inalienable right to Jefferson's Declaration. He "Life, Liberty, the Pursuit of Happiness and a Job." Certainly if happiness and prosperity are to be the portion of an American citizen. If five million men are unemployed, the conclusion will be that the much-vaunted American system has broken down. If it fails here, most men will say it fails everywhere. Certainly it fails at the crucial point. "If a man will not work, neither shall he eat" is sound doctrine. Is not the corollary true: "If a man is willing to work, he has a right to eat"? Here we are all agreed, and employers recognize that "something must be done about it." Still, what is being done?

UNCLE SAM GIVES JOBS

At the last session of Congress, mainly to make jobs for the unemployed, hundreds of millions of dollars were voted for building roads and public buildings, some of the latter not needed now. It was in recognition that Government owed it to the unemployed to find work for them to do. It is work that people want, not doles. But if no work is given, must people be allowed to starve? That is the question that will not down in City, State and Federal administrations even though we all agree in principle that taxes ought to be levied only for "government economically administered." Nobody can defend, except as an emergency, to give jobs to men who would otherwise go hungry by appropriating money for unnecessary public works. Yet the policy of public works to give employment is tactfully approved in the White House and in Congress, and New York has levied higher taxes on incomes to feed the unemployed this winter.

WHO MUST GIVE JOBS?

Admit that everybody is entitled to the right to work, as well as to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," and that Uncle Sam is right in appropriating money to give jobs to thousands, what about the millions who cannot get on Uncle Sam's payroll? Most of them have had steady jobs in private industry, and now if the unemployed are to get jobs they must be employed by established industries where they have formerly worked.

And many concerns have been closed down for lack of orders or are running only on part time. How can unemployed are to get jobs they must they give employment when they are partly or completely shut down. Take for example, the case of a textile mill. For twenty years it has been employing 500 people and having markets for its products. Lately it has been unable to sell what it produces. It has paid no dividends. It has lost money. How can it employ faithful employes under such circumstances? The owner of the mill and the operative are both in the same ditch. The one cannot pull the other out. Labor cannot say to capital under these circumstances: "You must give me a job and a regular wage." Capital cannot because its mills have no demand for its productions and no present return upon its investment.

MUST LOOK AHEAD

While in this exigency, though every man has an inherent right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, plus work, he cannot get it from factory or business owners which are in the same distress, or similar, to the worker. A capitalist who cannot get returns on his investment and the laborer who cannot get work are in the same boat today. Undoubtedly present conditions could have been averted by wise foresight and provision. General Swope, head of the General Electric Company, points the way for tomorrow. It is aptly some such system had not been in practice years ago. It would have helped to avert the worst ills of the present depression. He suggests provision be made for life insurance, accident insurance, unemployment insurance and a pension system that would enable every worker to retire at 70 on half pay, together with voice to the worker in the administration of these plans.

Cottonseed Meal To Fatten Bigs

When cottonseed meal is mixed with fish meal as a part of the ration fed to fattening pigs, better gains at lower costs are made when the fish meal is fed alone as the protein carrier.

"Experiments which we have made at the North Carolina Experiment Station show that fish meal containing 55 percent protein is slightly better for fattening pigs than tankage containing 60 percent protein. Then when equal parts of cottonseed meal is mixed with this fish meal as a supplement to corn, the mixture is superior to the fish meal alone," says Earl H. Hostetler in charge of animal husbandry research at State College. "Since we secured these good results by mixing fish meal and cottonseed meal, we decided to mix the cottonseed meal with tankage and see what results would be obtained."

Fifty-seven pigs weighing 85 pounds each were selected for the test. They were divided into two groups and fed for 77 days on the self-feeders. In group 1 were 29 pigs which were fed white shelled corn, fish meal one-half and cottonseed meal one-half, with mineral. In group 2 were 28 pigs which received the same feed except that 40 percent tankage was substituted for the fish meal.

The pigs in group 1 gained 15 pounds more than those in group 2. The first group consumed 15 pounds of feed as compared with 863 for the second group. Total feed required to produce pounds of gain was only 4.2 in group one as compared with 4.8 pounds in group two. The first group of pigs gave a profit over all costs of $1.53 a pig as against $1.10 for the tankage group. Therefore, says Mr. Hostetler, the tankage had cost $39.1 a ton instead of the $40 it did cost, the profit would have been the same in each group. The increased gain in group 1 would have been offset by the lower cost of animal protein in group 2.

He wants trade associations under the supervision of the Federal government. The fly in the ointment of Swope's plan is that the conditions it upon repeal of the anti-trust law so that trade associations may practice measures contrary to the law against monopolies. An matter of fact, one of the contributing causes of the present debacle is due to the merging monopolies given immunity by governmental blindness or favoritism. But the fact that Mr. Swope and other big employers are looking to prevention of the ills from which we now suffer is heartening. In addition to his suggestion here are two that are necessary:

1. The water should be squeezed out of the stocks so that earnings should be only on the money actually invested.
  2. Earnings of fat years, except a fair dividend of not more than 8 percent, should be put in a reservoir to be drawn upon in lean years.
- Given these two provisions, with suitable insurance plans as proposed by Mr. Swope, Labor and Capital will find ways to prevent unemployment and each have its fair proportion of what their joint labors produce.
- A man has a right to work. All concede that. The big thing is to agree on practical plans to see that the job and the man are brought together and that such panics as the present do not bring distress. It can be done.
