HARDIN ENTERTAINS AT BEAUTIFUL BRIDGE PARTY
One of the loveliest parties of the summer season was the affair given by Mrs. Lauriston Hardin at her home on Love Lane Thursday afternoon. Beautifully arranged bowls of delphinium and larkspur in shades of blue and rose were placed in the rooms where the eight tables were grouped. The hostess was assisted in receiving her guests by her mother, Mrs. W. L. Hardin, and Mrs. J. F. Abel.
Following several spirited progresses, Mrs. James M. Long was found to be the holder of the top score and Mrs. Roy Francis cut the competition. Both were presented attractive prizes. Salad and ice courses were served after the games, with each table being centered by an old-fashioned bouquet of pink and blue flowers. Attending were: Mrs. R. R. Campbell, Mrs. S. T. Raymond, of New York; Mrs. M. H. Reeves, Mrs. R. L. Prevost, Mrs. Jerry Colkitt, Mrs. Roy J. Dicus, Mrs. Ben Massie and guest, Miss Helen Wright, of Talladega, Ala.; Mrs. M. G. Stamey, Mrs. N. M. Medford, Miss Isabel Ferguson, Mrs. H. B. Atkins, Miss Betsy Quinlan, Mrs. Charles Badgett, Jr., Mrs. W. F. Swift, Mrs. Thomas M. Seawell, Mrs. S. P. Gay, Mrs. J. Seaver, Mrs. Alvin Ward, Mrs. James M. Long, Mrs. J. C. Patrick, Mrs. John Ferguson, Miss Nancy Killian, Mrs. T. Lenoir Gwyn, Mrs. J. W. Ray, Miss Eleanor Bushnell, Miss Mary Kirkpatrick, Miss Fay Gibbs, and Miss Annie Albright. Joining the bridge group after the games were Mrs. Homer Platt, Mrs. Theodore McCracken, and Miss Annie Dee Kirkpatrick.

How Are You Going to Pay for Liquor When You Can't Buy Bread?
Hey there, you old fellows who are allers rasin' Cain, There's a little simple matter that I'd have you explain, It's a whole lot easier to tell it now than after you are dead, How are you goin' to pay for liquor if you can't buy bread?
It's been awful hard to get it for the last few years you know, And believe me when I tell you it was best that it was so, For the awful price per gallon when your pocket book is bled, How are you goin' to pay for liquor when you can't buy bread?
Pears to one who thinks about it that it's awful hard to buy, When you hear the wife and children and the babes begin to cry, For a little bite of somethin' fore they have to go to bed, Tell me then how'll you buy the liquor when you can't buy bread?
Let the ones who'd like to change the law and make it very brief, Think awhile about it if yo wouldn't want to be a thief, How this thing is ever goin' to work for after all is done and said, How do you expect to buy the liquor when you can't buy bread?
I know you'll raise the same old question, for they've done it in the past, How they're going to raise the revenue for government to last, Would you let the women and children suffer until they're nearly dead, Then how are you goin' to buy the liquor when you can't buy bread?
Like as not the democrats and 'publicans when they go to make a slate Will tudy to the wet and drinking ones who want to make a date, To repeal the prohibition law and show it 'er our head, But how are they goin' to pay for liquor if they can't buy bread?
J. M. NEWTON.

HOOVER MEETS MANAGER
President Hoover Monday met for the first time since the Chicago convention with Everett Sanders, whom he has charged directly with managing his re-election.
The new chairman of the Republican national committee reported he had found Mr. Hoover "engrossed with his governmental duties" and had only paid his respects. The President previously had served notice of a business-before-politics attitude.
Archie asked his deaf aunt, who was visiting, "Isn't it awful to be deaf? Just think of having to wash your ears every day and never getting any good out of them."
