

Report Is Spread That Sen. Reynolds May Quit His Job

Many Are Ready To Push Way To His Place If He Does Resign

There is a possibility that Senator Robert R. Reynolds may resign as Junior Senator from North Carolina and enter into private life again, according to close observers of the political world and the recent actions of the senator and his European trip. T. M. Prigdon, writer for the Charlotte News last week gave his reasons why he thought that Senator Reynolds might soon quit his post.

With no one in the New World knowing what Senator Bob Reynolds may be up to next, and everybody, including his own supporters, taking on an attitude of expectancy, the mysterious source from which comes explanations for everything that is political has been busy.

Particularly expectant is that group which will fall into phalanxes and platoons and flying wedges at the drop of the hat should it so happen that Senator Bob does resign his senatorial seat soon after his return from Scandinavia, Russia and other places over there. The Senator landed in New York today.

Should he, there will be senatorial booms to inflate, and gubernatorial alignments to readjust, in the light of a new state of affairs. There will be much going and coming and pressure putting.

SEVERAL REPORTS

Several reports are current, all pointing to the supposed anticipated resignation. The reports had been around for weeks, since the senator's departure, for a not fully explained trip abroad, but were not given credence among the back home politicians until "Red Buck" Bryant took notice of them in Sunday's Charlotte News in his correspondence from Washington.

Since then the political talk has centered on that and little else. Reynolds is tired of the senate, the reports say, and he will take a roving commission with a big corporation, he will represent European distillers in this country, he will go on the chautauqua platform, he will form a company with McAdoo, he will—well, what have you?

So—North Carolina political boom builders are getting their material ready, in case there should be work to do.

Governor Ehringhaus would have the duty of making the appointment of a successor. The governor, so the politicians say, is not averse to the idea of being Senator Bailey's successor in 1936, which might have a bearing on any appointment that may be made.

MENTION McLENDON

In making his appointment it was considered the governor probably would think first of his campaign manager, L. B. McLendon, but Mr. McLendon has so recently moved into the western North Carolina territory—into Greensboro from the more eastern Durham—that he could not be appointed as western senator with arousing a terrific uproar from his longer domiciled westerners.

As Reynolds' opponent in 1938, Mr. McLendon might fit in excellently, but as his successor after having been in the territory only a few weeks—it wouldn't work, politicians say.

Also Mr. McLendon might make an acceptable western candidate for governor in 1936—a possibility which has been mentioned.

With those things in mind, according to the dopesters, Governor Ehringhaus might begin to consider the other senatorial available.

THEN, THERE'S GARDNER
There is former Governor O. Max Gardner—now a big business man, and probably wouldn't accept, even if it were offered him.

There is Clyde R. Hoy—who has been represented as saying that he would have no political office which he people do not give him at the polls.

There is Colonel T. L. Kirkpatrick—who is an avowed candidate for governor in 1936 and a menace to the administration candidate. The colonel will receive full consideration, from a political standpoint, for this reason. His friends are already firing letters in to him, urging him to be prepared.

There is former Judge Tam C. Bowie, also a gubernatorial possibility, but who was discounted so definitely in the 1932 senatorial campaign that he would have difficulty in approaching the appointment.

There is Judge Wilson Warlick—spoken of for governor—he and a half dozen others, any one of which could be persuaded to give up their gubernatorial ambitions in order to be a senator.

But, they all say sadly, Reynolds hasn't resigned yet.

Nov. 1 Is Deadline To Get License For All Highway Signs

The State Department of Revenue yesterday set November 1 as the deadline for removal of all signs from the highways which do not bear license tags in accordance with the 1933 statute.

The act became effective on June 1, but the time was formally extended to August 1, and since that date the department has contented itself with notifying violators. However, the department yesterday gave notice to all that will end on November 1, and all signs on which the tax remains unpaid will be summarily removed.

The department issued the following notice:

"Under the provision of Section 151 of the Revenue Act the Commissioner of Revenue is charged with the duty of having all advertising displayed on the highways of the State not having affixed thereto an identification furnished by the Commissioner of Revenue that the license tax required for the display of such advertisements, has been paid, removed or destroyed.

Numerous notices have been given to advertisers throughout the State, both by correspondence and through field representatives of the Department. There are still a large number of these advertisements not having any indication of the tax having been paid.

A request will be sent the Highway Commission on November 1 to proceed to remove all advertisements not bearing the imprint showing the tax as having been paid, as provided in the Statute."

"Is the cold cream guaranteed to take out wrinkles?" asked the old maid.

"Why madam," responded the impertinent drug store clerk, "the cold cream will take the wrinkles out of corrugated iron."

"If that's the case," came the reply, "I should think you'd use a bit of it on your skull!"

This New Treatment For Piles-Seldom Fails

Many sufferers from Piles or Hemorrhoids have become despondent because they have been led to believe that their case was hopeless and that there was nothing in the world to help them.

To these people we say, "Go to Smith's Cut Rate Drug Co. or your druggist and get an original 60 cent box of MOAVA SUPPOSITORIES." Inserted into the rectum according to directions they reach the source of the trouble and by their soothing, healing, antiseptic action first allay the pain and soreness and then by direct contact with the piles bring about a reduction and you get rest and comfort once again.

It's simply wonderful how speedily they act. Blessed relief often comes in two days. Even in cases of long standing marvelous results have been obtained. (adv)
