North Carolina is Looking To Federal Gov. For Protection

RALEIGH—North Carolina today looked to the federal government to protect the aridity indicated by Tar Heels' 150,000 majority against repeal of the dry amendment.

Governor Ehringhaus said the state proposes to endeavor to enforce its prohibition law but also "expects the federal government to aid in enforcing its dry statutes in accordance with the 21st amendment."

North Carolina's Turlington law, enacted in 1921, will prohibit the manufacture, sale or possession for sale of intoxicating liquors in this state, after repeal. Beer and wine of 32 per cent alcoholic content were legalized last spring.

The state, under federal prohibition, left enforcement of the Turlington act to local officers. There were 7,659 prohibition cases in municipal and county court in the fall terms of 1933 and spring terms of 1932, while the superior court handled 3,371 territorial attorney general's cases revealed.

Governor Ehringhaus was asked if the highway patrol or other state agencies would be assigned to prohibition work. He replied that the duties of the patrol were defined by law, adding:

"The state intends to attempt to do its part in enforcing the Turlington act."

Under prohibition, federal agents have worked hand in hand with local enforcement officers, turning over to them many of the "small fry."

Meanwhile, the United Dry Forces, which led the anti-repeal fight in North Carolina, prepared to get into action for future work. Dr. W. L. Potent of Wake Forest, its president, has said drys expect the 1935 legislature to be dry and repeal the beer and wine law.

The executive committee of the organization was called to meet here Saturday, to map out future plans.

The drys' smashing victory still had many persons wondering. Drys themselves were surprised at the size of their majority. They had expected to win, but not overwhelmingly.

POTPOURRI

Ostrich Eggs A full-grown ostrich is 7 or 8 feet tall and weighs as much as 300 pounds. Its eggs weigh about three pounds and the newly hatched birds are as large as fully grown hens. Each female deposits about ten eggs, but the male guards them and even sits upon the nest at night.

Union Thanksgiving Service To Be Held

At 7:30 P. M. at First Church With Rev. Paul Hill, Pastor, Delivering Sermon

The annual custom of holding a union service on Thanksgiving morning will be observed again this year, with the service of the day taking place at 7:30 P. M. at the First Church, with Rev. Paul Hill, pastor, delivering the message.

Services will be arranged for representatives from all the churches in the city.

The special Thanksgiving services held at 7:30 P. M. at the First Church last year attracted a large crowd. It is expected by those in charge that a larger crowd will be present at the service this year.

Voluntary announcement regarding the details of the program will be made next week.

FAST WAYNESVILLE STUDENTS ATTEND RADIO SCHOOL

For the past two or three weeks the Fast Waynesville Elementary School has been taking advantage of the daily broadcast of Radio School which is broadcast from W. W. N. C. and sponsored by the State Board of Education, Raleigh.

The program is under the direction of well known educators, and include current events, literature, history, music, and industrial arts. Each class can be profitably correlated with regular class-room work. The programs are attended by the three upper grades during each day of the school week and also by the four lower grades during the first thirty minutes of the music appreciation period on Friday. Teachers are responsible for seeing that their class-room work is properly related to the subject of the Radio School.

The radio is being furnished by the "Parent Teacher" Association. According to the report of the principal of the school, Mr. W. Thomas Reeves, an announcement can be made here that the radio is being properly used in the classroom. The program is a profitable one and that the program should have a daily broadcast. The program is a profitable one and that the program should have a daily broadcast.
