Crime s nothing new. It is as old as the human race. The sen of the first man committed murder by killing his own lighther and all of these crimes, against society have been more or less provident in all ages and in all countries and with all people.

Two thousand years ago a mwyor versed in the church or Eclesiastitical ed him what the Mosaic law provided and the lawyer told him. After some discussion the Master told him how o treat his neighbor, then the lawyer asked him who his neighbor was and Christ told him the story of the Good Samaritan. That story was not told for the benefit of the inquiror done but it was told for the bent the law enforcement efficer or officers and people for all times and in the law enforcement efficer or officers and would no doubt tend to curb the beautiful story, the Nazare: set forth three separate and distinct philliosphies of life. After you go home it would be well for you to read this story again and study it. The Mister said that a man went down from decusalem to Jerisha and only in the county to make arrests anywhere in the county then m Jerusalem to Jericho and on they took what he had and left him officer of the town. One of the attention that He used the word worst places for the breeding of crime thickes they way he fell among theires and hieves there were more than one. Now these thieves had their philoso-thy of life and it was this: "What is ours is mine and I am going to take. "Later a priest came by; saw is injured man; had compassion on m; was sorry for him but passed on the other side of the road, and out his way, and a Levite did likevise. These two men the priest and he Levite had their philosophies of ife and it was this: "What is mine life and it was this: "What is mine is mine, and I am going to keep it." In the first instance, there were several thieves. In the second instance there were two men. Then a Samaritan came that way. He saw the man who had been robbed and injured and he went where he was: put him on his horse; carried him to the inn and paid his expenses. This man also had his philosophy of life and it was this: "That which I have is mine, but I am willing to share it." And I call your attention to the fact that in this instance there was only one in this instance there was only one

I have referred to the story of the Good Samaritan because I have found Good Samaritan because I have found no other person that has been able to give a better standard by which to live than the Master did in this story. The standard by which to live in a society such as ours is today. I do not want you to be misled, however, and misconstruct the meaning of taking something from your neighbor ed to call on this office for people
