Timely Questions And Answers On Farm Problems

Question: Should grain be fed to poultry in troughs or in the litter? Answer: For sanitary reasons alone the grain should be fed in troughs. Some poultrymen believe that feeding grain in litter gives the birds much needed exercise but, unless a close confinement system is practiced, the birds will receive ample exercises on the range. Then, too, there is a tendency to neglect changing the litter which makes for unsanitary conditions. A V shape trough is very simple and inexpensive to build and should be used at all times for grain feeding.

Question: Can a young calf be cured of the scours? Answer: The common scours, or indigestion is one of the most frequent ailments of a young calf and can be cured by isolating the animal and reducing the milk ration at least one-half. From one to three tablespoonfuls of castor oil mixed in a pint of fresh milk should then be given the animal. After the oil has acted, give a teaspoonful of a mixture composed of one part salol and two parts of subnitrate of bismuth or bicarbonate of soda. This can be repeated at six hour intervals until the diarrhea is stopped. This cure is for common scours. If the animal has white scours the animal should be isolated and a veterinarian consulted at once.

Want Tobacco Program Continued By Government

The need for a continued tobacco control program was voiced at State College last week when 500 representative growers unanimously called upon the AAA to continue the adjustment program. At the same time, the growers said the 25 per cent Kerr-Smith tax should be raised to give additional protection to contract signers from non-signing growers who would greatly increase their production if not placed under restrictions.

Many of the growers asked for a 50 per cent tax, but J. B. Hutson, chief of the AAA tobacco section, stated that the present legislation has set the maximum at 33 1/3 per cent. If a higher rate is demanded by the growers, Congress will have to amend the act.

Following the general meeting of the growers, the executive committee, which acts in an advisory capacity for the Carolinas, Virginia and Georgia, met and decided to conduct a referendum about the middle of November to determine whether all the contract signers wish the Kerr-Smith tax imposed in 1935 and how high they wish the tax to be. The executive committee agreed to recommend a continuation of the program but did not decide definitely how long it should last.

The growers enthusiastically endorsed the program as it has functioned thus far and urged that Hutson be empowered to adjust the program to changing conditions from time to time. The discussions were led by Mr. Hutson and Dean I. O. Schaub, of State College. Congressman John H. Kerr, co-author of the tobacco control act, spoke briefly. James E. Thigpen, assistant to Hutson, and E. Y. Floyd, of State College, director of the adjustment program in North Carolina, attended the meeting.

The Son: "Look me over, dad, Nifty scenery, what? I'll say Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like me." The Sister: "I reckon not. Solomon was a wise man."

Rotation Of Legumes Increase Corn Yield

The value of crop rotation and good fertilization has been demonstrated at the Alexander county farm home, where the yield of corn has been increased from eight to 60 bushels per acre.

In 1924, a 10-acre field was planted to corn after it had been left to grow in weeds for several years. Only 150 pounds of 3-12-3 fertilizer were applied to the acre. The yield was 83 1/2 bushels, or 8 1/3 bushels per acre. In 1927 the same field was planted to corn after a heavy crop of lespedeza had been turned under on one-half of the field while soybeans were plowed into the soil on the other half. Three hundred pounds of 4-10-2 fertilizer were applied to the acre. The field had been enlarged to 12 acres and the yield was 500 bushels, or 41 2/3 bushels per acre.

The rotation was followed for another three years. Lespedeza was turned under on the whole field and 300 pounds of 4-10-4 fertilizer were applied per acre. However a severe drought cut the yield to 12 1/2 bushels to the acre.

At that time the plan of rotation was changed from three years to four years. In 1934 corn was planted again after lespedeza had been turned under. No other nitrogen was applied. Two hundred pounds of 0-10-4 fertilizer were applied to the acre and the harvest was 720 bushels, or 60 bushels to the acre. This improvement was brought about by turning under legumes at definite points during the rotation, says E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College. The usual method of planting and cultivation were followed. The only additional expense was for some lespedeza seed several years ago. Since then the farm has supplied its own seed and a small surplus to sell.

Better Pastures Needed By Live-stock Men In N. C.

Better pastures are probably the greatest need in the feeding program of North Carolina livestock men at the present time. The problem growing out of lack of sufficient hay, which used to be one of the livestock man's chief concerns, has been solved to a great extent by making spring hay from cereal grains and using hardy legumes planted in the fall.

So far, however, little progress has been made in developing good pastures, says A. C. Kimrey, extension dairyman at State College. Many pasture failures, he adds, have been the result of attempting to start the pasture on poor, unsuitable soil. Success with pastures can be achieved only on good soil, he says, either on bottom lands or fertile hill-sides. The value of a good pasture growing on fertile soil is recognized by all experienced livestock men, he points out.

Pastures also serve the purpose of checking erosion. Grass on hillsides holds the soil in place, and on the lower lands it collects the earth which has washed down from higher places and keeps it from being carried away into the creeks and streams.

There are times when it is advisable or necessary to start pastures on poorer uplands. Kimrey has pointed out, although he did recommend this as a general practice. This as a general practice, land, Bermuda grass set out in four foot rows makes the best grass. In addition the land should be seeded to Dallas grass at the rate of five pounds to the acre and lespedeza at the rate of 15 pounds to the acre. Kimrey says that Bermuda grass can be kept from spreading into ad-
