Athletic Ball To Be Staged Tonight At Canton School

Canton.—(Special to the Mountaineer.)—Plans are virtually completed for the execution of Canton's greatest social event of the season, the Athletic Ball to be given in the high school gymnasium Thursday evening, December 6th, sponsored by Canton Chamber of Commerce officials and practically every local civic organization, the dance, which is being promoted under the direction of Mayor J. I. Reeves, with approximately 200 couples expected to attend many from neighboring towns.

R. D. Coleman, Jr., vice chairman and actively in charge of arrangements for the dance, has announced that he has been fortunate in securing Jack Sterns' West Coast orchestra to play. This orchestra has established quite an enviable reputation, having played in such prominent ballrooms as the Triton and Coconino Grove and have many radio broadcasts to their credit. The group is composed of 12 pieces and includes a trio of female songsters.

The high school gymnasium will be fully decorated, and the decorations committee has intimated that favors, confetti, etc., will be plentiful.

Sponsors have been invited from all the neighboring towns, with whom Canton engages in athletic contests, to attend this beautiful affair. The dance will open promptly at 9:30 o'clock Thursday evening with a grand march led by the visiting sponsors. The dance will last until 1:30 a. m.

Sunday School

by HENRY LESSON RADCLIFFE

THE CHRISTIAN TEACHER

International Sunday School Lesson for December 9, 1934.
Golden Text: "Give diligence to present thyself approved unto God a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, handling aright the word of truth." 2 Tim. 2:15.
Lesson Text: Matt. 7:24-29; Acts 18:24-28.

Suppose a man in this great scientific day would suddenly discover what he believed to be the key to human happiness, well-being, and contentment—something he had never heard of or thought of before? What should he do with it?

Don't you think that such a man, if normal, would be moved to impart to the rest of his fellow-beings the wonderful secret that he would become so enthusiastic for the dissemination of the magical formula that he would drop all else to spread the joyful news?

Well, that is what happened to a small group of people in old Palestine nearly two thousand years ago. They came into contact with Jesus. He heard his teachings about life, became convinced that they held the key to these blessings, and it was not strange, in their enthusiasm they began going about spreading the gospel, which means "good news."

Then, another thing, these favored, happy people, holding the solution of life's attitudes and problems, immediately became conscious of the obligation which followed, a duty and happiness recognized and acted upon, of so conducting themselves as exponents of the new "way of life," they became very circumspect and considerate in their relationship to others, so that non-believers would be led to the new faith and not rebuffed by their exhibition of its practical applications.

That is the simple, human explanation of the marvelous spread of the Christian faith. Of course, the divine inspiration and truth behind it facilitated the growth but Jesus deliberately rested the hopes of success for his kingdom in human agencies. He relied entirely upon mankind to uphold, expound, and exemplify his standards of life: he made no other plans for propagation of his principles of living. If these human agencies had failed, if they yet fail, mankind will descend into darkness, amid cruelty and selfishness.

Each genuine, sincere believer in the Christian way of life today inherits the same obligation. If completely convinced and converted, he should be fused with some of the same enthusiasm and determination to carry the good news to others. Our lesson today emphasizes the opportunity of teaching Christianity to others, in the process of doing which nothing is so persuasive as an appealing example actually living in the flesh. An ordinary life, thus illuminated, becomes gigantic in its future effects on mankind.

"Every disciple of Christ is an architect," well says Rev. G. H. Hubbard. "Every hearer of truth is a builder of some sort for time and eternity." After enumerating some of the outstanding buildings, as St. Peter's in Rome, St. Paul's in London, and so on, the author continues: "These with all their beauty and grandeur, with all that they represent of labor and cost and consecration, are not for a moment to be compared with those infinitely nobler structures that adorn the landscape of the ages, the characters of Christ's worthy followers, who by doing the words of Jesus at whatever cost of pain and sacrifice have at last built the completed temple."

"A man who takes Christ for his pattern," says Rev. Herbert M. Gesner. "Christ's teachings for his principles of life is safe and shall endure. His life is right founded on a permanent, unchanging base." Our lesson text draws the parallel picture of two men building their houses. One selected a strong secure foundation, while the other did not. When the winds blew, the floods came, and the rains descended, which house, or life, would endure? The answer is already in your mind. Only the foolish would build physically upon an insecure base, but many do not see the same wisdom in the construction of character and life.

Jesus astonished the people of his day with his authoritative teaching. He was unlike the religious leaders of his day, and would probably be unlike many of ours in this day. "While Jesus taught with authority," as Dr. Joseph Port Newton differentiates, "the scribes taught by authorities, a very different method. What he said the souls of men affirmed to be true; what they said needed to be proved by a catena of references." Jesus knew from his own experience that the words he spoke were true, he had no doubt the wisdom and desirability of living the kind of life he actually followed. Consequently, his teachings rang with a new accent of certainty and affirmation, long absent in the formal religious teachings of the scribes.

Today many are not astonished at "his doctrine." We have been born into a world improved for nearly two thousand years by the ameliorating and beneficent influences of his doctrines. Many of the old evils have disappeared from the face of the world human kindness and brotherly love have made the world a better and sweeter place in which to live; all because of the reforming ideals of life and service which Jesus gave in his teachings. How different might be our viewpoint, if we could experience the sensation of those living in an earlier, more squalid age, when the vision first burst upon the world in all its entrancing loveliness and promise. Should we allow the receipt of so many of its benefits to dim our appreciation and devotion to it?
