Louisa's Letter

Times change customs, in most ways. I have a very good friend who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Douglas Edwards, in Barrow, Fla., and her aunt, Mrs. Burgess Smith, in Savannah, Ga., returned to town.

Do you think I am a shamless creature? DORA M. MASS.

Answer: Personally I think you and the young man have worked out a fine plan. As I understand it, your friend could not afford to take you on very often if he had to foot the bill, while if you pay your share you get to go to twice as many places. Another thing you say, you are not in love and that also works well for your arrangement. I say this, because when a man is in love with a girl he usually wants to buy things for her and he has a little resentment in his heart if he is bearing her part.

Obituary

In memory of our dear brother E. K. Pearson who departed this life Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 25, 1934.

His mission was over among us. As the evening day had come, so he left this world of trouble, for a new life just beyond.

We should rejoice, but we sorrow. For the one we'll see no more. He now dwells with his loved ones. Who have passed to that beautiful shore.

It's hard to go on without him. We've grown so used to him here. But we hope some day to meet him. Beyond this vale of tears.

Could I but see him smile again In the old familiar way. I cannot think that he is dead. Oh, no! he is just away.

Some day he'll come smiling back to me. Across the great divide, Together we'll cross the crystal sea. And rest on the other side. By Vessie Parton and Mrs. Frank Henry.
