The Honeybee

Since earliest times the honeybee has been recognized as the eleverest of preservers and man long has coveted her ample store of sweets. It visits to the flowers she gave more than she received. Now we know that the gathering of honey, the primary object of her visits, is incidental to her role of pollen distributor. It was not until man came to plant single crops In large areas and found to his surprise that they were unfruitful, that be learned of the services of the honey

Honor "The Pied Piper"

Hameln, Germany, is certain some Important event is responsible for its legend of "The Pied Piper," who sup posedly freed the town of rats and in revenge for not being publ. kill naped 130 of its children on June 25 1284. Not only are there numerous records from that year and several monuments and a building to commemorate the episode, writes T. W. Macdonald, Washington, In Collier's Weekly, but the town has held annua memorial celebrations for the past 650 years and still mantains mechanical figures on the city hall which enact the story every hour.

Ohio Grew Own Tobacco

Nearly every ploneer farmer in Ohio raised toleneco on his farm, not for market but for his own pipe. One exception to this was Ashtabula county where surplus tobacco was made into clears by the women in their homes and exchanged at the store for groceries. Later on when Buckeye tobacco was produced for market, it was packed into hogsheads and harded over the national roud to eastern points, and some of it found its way to Eu-
