"What was the war like, Daddy?"

"Daddy tries not to remember - - nothing but the end - - the Armistice - - when peace was proclaimed. War itself is very powerful. . . very terrible, and we pray it will never again be necessary!"

"The Armistice—peace was proclaimed." What memories that recalls—of young boys, the daddies of today, rushing back to the arms of their own dads and mothers. Sweethearts coming back to tenderness and romance, after all that horror out there. The strange feeling of putting on a civilian's clothes again. . . walking through familiar streets. . . meeting old friends. . . back to a job! It all seemed so far away down in these black trenches. No man thought he'd come back to live normally again while shrapnel whizzed by his ear, and his buddies fell in action, one by one around him. "The Armistice —peace was proclaimed." We hoped then it would be an everlasting peace. We still hope so. . . for the families and the homes of today who see every husband and father as great a hero as they'll ever want!
