Marionettes Prove To Be Popular At Lake Junaluska

Judith Clayton, of Miami, Florida, and her famous "Marionette Revue" proved a popular auditorium attraction here Saturday and pleased a capacity audience. The Clayton marionettes are favorites with Junaluska audiences and the show introduced some new members of the marionette family in addition to Nikki, the clown, and other favorites.

The main feature of Saturday night's entertainment was a clever musical comedy skit, "Hello, House," the story being adapted from the Uncle Remus tales, always favorites with an audience of grown-up and children.

The Clayton Marionettes have recently finished their season in the East, playing there in a theater circuit in New York City and in schools and clubs.

Alabama Congressman Heard At Junaluska. Says People Must Learn To Play

Arriving here barely in time to step on the platform for a lecture engagement at Stuart Auditorium, Congressman Joe Starnes, of Alabama, gave as an excuse for his tardiness the fact that he was intrigued by the scenic beauty of Western North Carolina on the ride from Gunterville, Alabama, that he fell by the wayside to admire the view.

And "smiling Joe," knows his mountains, for in his travel and war service he has known the beautiful mountains of Eastern France. "But none are so entrancing as these," he smiles. "I almost have to pinch myself to realize that they are really true."

"In fact," "smiling Joe" avers, "I'm crazy about mountains. There's something about a mountain that suggests strength and security and makes one believe in the eternal verities. I never get into the mountain country without experiencing a new thrill."

This was the Congressman's first visit to the Junaluska Methodist Assembly, where he has been participating in a Social Congress, speaking and discussing his pet hobby—improvement of conditions for the Southern farmer.

"I am impressed," said "smiling Joe," "with the discriminating taste of the Methodist church in selecting this marvelous spot. It is ideal for serious study, discussion and recreation. It is accessible to the most attractive park area in the United States, close to the eastern seaboard, it has water power and other resources that make it an ideal playground. And we have got to learn to play. American people have been too busy engaged in business and commerce and trade to take time for recreation and to cultivate the finer instincts. This area affords a remarkable opportunity for people to gain a better appreciation of the good and the beautiful."

Church Must Take Advantage Of Opportunities Now

Dr. Shackford, of Rock Hill, Tells Junaluska Audience World Must Have Faith In God

Dr. John W. Shackford, pastor of the First Methodist church, Rock Hill, South Carolina, and executive secretary of the Social Congress which recently adjourned its annual meeting here, spoke from the Junaluska platform Sunday. Dr. Shackford portrayed the world order today as in the midst of struggle and confusion which must be interpreted in terms of faith in God and men. If the church does not take advantage of her opportunity to express the purpose of God for His world, he said that other forces would shape the new order, and the church itself instead of being the freest institution of human society would deteriorate into a mere echo of the voice of a master other than Him for whom she is called.

Finding his text in the eleventh chapter of Mark, twenty-second verse, "Have Faith in God," Dr. Shackford said that faith in God implies faith in men and this, thought was central with Jesus and His followers. Nations die, he said, that fail to fulfill this purpose of God.

"We are again in one of the conclusive periods in the world's history," said Dr. Shackford. "Some must die that are no longer factors. Some barriers to human progress must be removed. The cause of the convulsion is man's mastery of the physical forces of the world, that bring them to work. The effect of this is seen in the production of material things, and the reduction of the material world to man labor; in the progress of the necessary human activities in the possible human activities in other fields. This process has been watershed in human history which we pass from the necessary economic scarcity and philosophy and struggle that came about that era, to the economic abundance, with the philosophy and organization that inevitably produces."

Teachers Of The Bethel District Schools Organize

The teachers of the Bethel district met with Principal C. C. Hanson in the Bethel school building last Saturday afternoon to make plans for the year's work and to complete all matters of organization, preparatory to beginning school on Monday.

Thirty teachers, the entire teacher personnel of the Bethel district, were present. They are as follows:

Bethel—C. C. Hanson, principal; J. D. Freeman, coach; Ernest Messer, Mary Ferguson, Mrs. Ruth Tucker, R. C. Cannon and L. A. McClean; Sara Moore, Tyson Cathey, Mary Davis, Pauline Frazier, Ruth Singleton, Frances Leatherwood, Pauline Sentelle, Bessie McClure, Mabel Clark, and Edna Rogers.

Cecil—Thomas Erwin, principal; Alma Chambers, Pearl James, Norma Painter, and Hugh Rogers.

Cruso—H. N. Francis, principal; Essie Sellers, Irma Patterson, Helen Greene, Lelia Kirkpatrick, Faye Gibbs, and Gladys Henson.

Spring Hill—Gay Chambers, principal; Mrs. Evelyn Chambers.

At the end of the teacher's meeting Miss Nettie Brogdon, of New College, at one time connected with Western Carolina Teacher's College and recognized as an authority on elementary school problems, talked to the teachers on "Planning Your Year's Work."

Miss Brogdon said that much of the subject matter taught at school avails nothing, since so many of the parents do not believe what is taught to the children. "We have been so busy trying to educate children," she said, "that we have forgotten to teach the parents. The school and the parents should come very close together in carrying on the work of the school. School and parents should know the same things, teach the same things and do the same things."

Other points of good advice given by Miss Brogdon were:

"Know where your children are and lead them from that point."

"Vary your plans to fit individual needs."

"Know what the children ought to know before you begin to teach them."

"Try to have more system in the school room."

CARD OF THANKS

Miss Ruth Hampton, superintendent and the staff of the Haywood County Hospital, acknowledge with grateful appreciation the gift of a child's bed, completely equipped from the campers and counselors of Camp Junaluska for Girls, in loving memory of Mother McCoy, the late Mrs. Wilbur McCoy, of St. Petersburg, Florida.

Mrs. McCoy was the mother of Miss Ethel J. McCoy, director and owner of Camp Junaluska, and Mrs. T. C. McKee, assistant director of the camp.
