Cover Crops Should Be Sown This Month

September is the best month of the year for sowing cover crops according to E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at State College.

The winter legumes which have real soil-building value in this state, he said, are crimson clover, vetch, and Austrian winter peas. The one to use depends largely upon soil type and personal preference.

Crimson clover should be sown at the rate of 25 pounds to the acre, while 20 pounds of vetch is enough for an acre. Thirty pounds of winter peas are needed to sow an acre thoroughly.

Vetch and winter peas are better for light sandy soils, as they may be sown deeper than crimson clover, and, therefore, will stand more drought when coming up.

Crimson clover is excellent for sandy loams, clay loams, and clay soils, but should not be sown when the soil is unusually dry. Wait for a good season and sow the seed very shallow.

To produce a satisfactory crop, Blair continued, the soil in which these legumes are to be grown should be inoculated, either naturally or artificially.

Blair also pointed out that soybeans and cowpeas hay should be mown in September. Soybeans should be cut as soon as the pods begin to form, and cowpeas are ready for mowing as soon as the blooming is well under way.

Allow the hay to wilt slightly in the trough, then rake it into windrows. After a few hours, put it up on a rake, either the tripod form or poles.
