Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Long returned on Tuesday night from a several weeks' trip to Florida, and are enthusiastic over the prospects for the coming season here. Particularly interested in country clubs and golf courses, they visited numerous ones on their trip.

In Orlando they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Sharkey. Mr. Sharkey is the owner of the most beautiful restaurant in Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Sharkey were guests last summer at the Waynesville Country Club.

In Coconino, Grove they visited Mr. and Mrs. Irwin J. Thomas, who have spent many seasons here, and who last summer had Mrs. Raymond Hyatt's house on the Eagles Nest Road.

The following essay written by an English school girl, 12 years of age, on "Greatness" was contributed to this column this week by Mrs. R. H. Blackwell: . . . "A person can never get true greatness by trying for it. . . You can get it when you are not looking for it. It is nice to have good clothes. . . it makes it a lot easier to act decent, but it is a sign of true greatness when you act and have not got them, just as good as if you had. . . Once there was a woman that had a big washing and hung it on a line. The line broke and let it all down in the mud. . . but she didn't say a word, only did it all over again, and this time she spread it on the grass, where it couldn't fall, but that night a dog with dirty feet ran over it. When she saw what was done, she sat down and did not cry a bit. All she said was, (Ain't it queer that it didn't miss nothing?) . . . That was true greatness. . .

Once there was a woman that lived near a pigpen, and when the wind blew that way it was very smelly and at first when she went there she could not smell anything but pig, but after she lived there a while she learned to smell the clover blossoms through it. That was true greatness. . . according to the foregoing illustrations. . . I wonder how many of us could qualify in a test for true greatness. . .
