Haywood Fair Association Is Dissolved

Directors Decide To Suspend Organization, And No Fair Will Be Held This Fall

At a meeting held here on Saturday the board of directors of the Haywood Fair association, it was decided to discontinue the fair, which has been held annually for the past three years, until the county board of commissioners feel they can offer some assistance in securing permanent fair grounds.

L. Green, president, said: "Since the fair is a county wide event, and confined to any one locality, the members of the fair association feel it should be backed by the county board of commissioners, and that a permanent site should be secured for its purpose."

After much discussion the directors decided that the cost of securing a suitable temporary site this year, was prohibitive, and until permanent arrangements could be made it was best to discontinue the fair.

D. Smith, secretary and treasurer of the fair association, was instructed to pay up all bills of the association, and since the movement was financially sponsored by the American Legion, to turn over the amount left for all indebtedness was cleared up that organization, to be paid on the Legion home.

While Mr. Green regretted the action taken by the directors on Saturday, he felt that under existing circumstances it was the wiser course to take at this time. He hopes that the fair will eventually see its way to get behind the fair and make a permanent event.

The board of directors of the fair association serving the group for the year were: T. L. Green, president; W. D. Smith, secretary and treasurer; J. Harden How-H, Tom Lee, Guy Massie, Medford Leatherwood and W. A. Bradley.

General Ferguson Describes Work Of River Flood Control

General Harley B. Ferguson, told Rotarians and visitors last night, in brief, of the work now in progress to check the Mississippi from overflowing each spring and damaging crops on thousands of acres.

"You who live in the highlands are protected by the overflow of the Mississippi, because when crops are ruined, cotton prices soar, you pay for the damage by not getting the cotton farmers here as vacationists, but having to pay more for cotton," he said.

The plan of the Flood Control act, of which General Ferguson is chairman, is working on the theory of getting off some of the bends in the river, and getting more fall over a greater distance. In that way the water finds its way to the Gulf quicker without overflowing the banks.

An approximation of one hundred million dollars has been set aside for control of floods on the Mississippi. To date something like forty dams have been spent, and a total of 14 feet in fall has been found by cutting through the necks of long bends in the river.

The floods of last winter gave a lesson to our work, and as the lower Mississippi did not overflow, we are gradually solving the problem that has been such a grave one to citizens along the river for years.
