4-H Club Members Attend Camp; Got Much From Program

The State Wildlife Conservation camp was held at the 4-H club camp in Swannanoa from August 23rd to 27th. Haywood county was allowed to send two 4-H club girls and two 4-H club boys.

The boys and girls who were selected to represent Haywood county at this camp were the club members who had shown the most interest in wildlife conservation in their project work. Geraldine Rogers, of the Fines Creek 4-H club, and Ella Louise Robinson, of the Canton 4-H club, represented the girls, while Billie McCrary and N. C. James, Jr., of the Fines Creek 4-H club represented the boys.

Geraldine Rogers said of the camp: "I can truthfully say that the week spent at this conference was one of the most interesting weeks of my life. I learned so much about the protection of wildlife in Western North Carolina. This wildlife conservation camp was under the direction of the extension service of State College."

"Of all the talks, the most interesting to me was the one on 'Plant and Tree Identification.' Mr. Rowell, however, gave some valuable information on 'Insect Life,' 'Game and Wildlife' was given much thought by the impressive talk by Dr. Z. P. Metcalf, Mr. George B. Lay, Mr. George McCullough, and Mr. Dorsey. The latter, who studies the birds of North Carolina took us on several field trips to identify the birds of our state. The importance of the birds seemed to impress every member at camp.

"The information given by the N. C. Wildlife department will be retained by me and held valuable during the years to come."
