Eat-Oysters-As-You-Please Movement Is Said To Be Gaining Ground Fast

Washington.—Chas. E. Jackson, president of the eat-oyster-in-any-month-you-please movement, has hailed the end of another campaign. "Progress," he beamed, "is being made. It's only a matter of time until September 1 will be just that, and not the beginning of the so-called R-months."

Jackson—who in addition to heading the E. O. I. A. M. Y. P. M., is deputy commissioner of fisheries—annually devotes himself to encouraging oyster-eating in R-less months.

"We wouldn't need to do this," he explained, "except for a loose banquet table remark by some dyspeptic old Roman about 2,000 years ago."

History, he said, hasn't retained the toga-bearer's name, but it has his words and they are fighting words to the E. O. I. A. M. Y. P. M.

They are: "Mensibus erratis vos ostrea manducatis"—or "oysters should be eaten only in certain months."

He doesn't know who reduced the philosophy down to R-months, but he wishes he did.

"This sort of reasoning," said Jackson, "is just as silly as—fish should not be eaten with milk."

He flagrantly violates both theories. "And," he added with pride, "without a stomach ache in a calendar year."

The E. O. I. A. M. Y. P. M. head has made a study of R-less month oysters. "The only difference," he said "is that summer oysters are a trifle thinner. That's when they fall in love—in May, June, July, and August."

Washington.—Chas. E. Jackson, president of the eat-oyster-in-any-month-you-please movement, has hailed the end of another campaign. "Progress," he beamed, "is being made. It's only a matter of time until September 1 will be just that, and not the beginning of the so-called R-months."

Drive Begun On Social Diseases

Raleigh.—A drive to enforce a long-dormant law requiring persons suffering from venereal diseases to take regular clinical treatment is under way in North Carolina.

Dr. C. V. Reynolds, state health officer, said victims of social diseases would be fined, jailed or both if they did not report regularly to private physicians or both.

Dr. J. C. Knox, state epidemiologist, said legal forms had been drawn for the detention of victims who refused to comply with the law. The blanks soon will be distributed to local law and health officers.

Members Of 30th Division To Hold 20th Annual Meet

The twentieth annual reunion of the 30th Division Association, composed of World War Veterans of the Carolinas and Tennessee, who formed National Guards' units of these states, is scheduled to be held September 29-30 in Greenville, S. C., site of Camp Sevier, where the division trained prior to going over seas.

Broadus Bailey, president of the association and since the war, a resident of Greenville, predicts a record attendance of survivors of the Old Hickory outfit.

Secretary of War Harry Woodring has accepted an invitation to deliver the principal address at the gathering of veterans. Attending the convention also will be numerous congressmen, senators and other dignitaries of the three states.

Springfield, Ill.—In a letter to the chamber of commerce here, a woman, whose name was not disclosed, asked for space to set up offices as a "professional listener."

She said she merely listened—for a price—to whatever anyone wished to confide because "confessions are good for peace of mind as well as for the soul."

Man Improves Big Farm To Find He Is On Wrong Place

Ernest N. Hudgins, young Washington and Virginia attorney, has learned he put in two years of his spare time fixing up a farm he did not own.

He bought a place at nearby Chantilly, Va., in 1935. The title was eminently good—it ran all the way back to Richard Henry Lee.

The trouble was that Hudgins bought the farm from a bank sight unseen, and failed to get specific instructions on how to get there.

He and Mrs. Hudgins liked the place they found. He cleared the ground and mended the roadway. His wife did an oil painting of the house.

Then, the other day, the real owner showed up. The Hudgins moved down the road to their own place.

Their "new" place is alright, though, they reported. For one thing, it has 145 acres; the other had but 80.

Says Baldness Is Without Remedy

The American Medical Association's "director of debunking" tells the nation's baldheaded men there is just nothing they can do about it.

When hair is gone, it's gone, said Dr. Frank J. Clancy of Chicago, director of the association's board of investigation.

"Tonics may create a little fuzz, but nothing more," he said in an interview. "I'm getting bald myself, but I don't try to kid myself into thinking there is anything that will grow hair on my head."

Dr. Clancy also dropped a word of warning to the women about "guaranteed" freckle removers.

"If they remove freckles, they must remove the outer layer of the skin and may contain caustics," he cautioned. "Better to have freckles than scars."

Name Of Town Too Long, Might Change

Brazil, Ind.—Citizens of William Williams Corner, a little community a mile south of here, are tired of saying and writing the name of the place where they live.

"It's too long. It takes too much breath and too much ink," they complain.

So they have prepared petitions asking that the community's name be changed to "Billville."
