house, and there stood an old, decrepit man, almost in tatters and rags, and that Mr. Welch stepped up to him and said, "Take this dollar and buy you a sack of flour."

NOTICE OF SUMMONS

NORTH CAROLINA, HAYWOOD COUNTY. IN THE SUPERIOR COURT. H. P. Campbell and wife, Mattie Campbell,

O. H. Shelton and wife, Alda Shelton, R. Cliff Moody and wife, Isobel Moody, Mrs. Frankie James and husband, David P. James, Lenoard Shelton and wife, Callie Shelton, Frank James, Hugh Shelton, Mary Ruby Davis, William G. Davis, Mrs. Elsie Davis League and husband, C. C. League, Mrs. Julia Rogers and husband, Nova Rogers.

The defendants, Leonard Shelton and wife, Callie Shelton, and Hugh L. Davis will take notice that an action entitled as above has been commenced in the Superior Court of Haywood County, North Carolina, for the recovery of possession of a tract of land containing about 6 acres, situate in the Town of Dellwood, Ivy Hill Township, Haywood County, N. C., and which tract of land is fully described in a deed from C. A. Campbell, et ux, to H. P. Campbell and wife, Mattie Campbell, recorded in Deed Book 96, page 525, Record of Deeds of Haywood County, N. C., and that the defendants are proper parties to this action relating to the said real property and the said defendants claim an interest in said property and the relief demanded consists wholly in excluding them from the actual or contingent lien or interest therein.

Dated this 5th day of August, 1938. KATE WILLIAMSON, Ass't. Clerk of Superior Court, Haywood County, North Carolina. No. 793—Sept. 8-15-22-29.

to five dollars, and he saw Mr. Welch go out in the hall and divide it equally among five people who were lined up out there, each of whom appeared to be in direst need. And so until the day he was stricken this work of charity was continued, day by day.

On yesterday afternoon I called at Mr. Welch's home to speak a word of sympathy to his family, and when I came out I saw a group of some half dozen men standing at the edge of the road with their backs to me, and I heard one of them say, "Well, I don't know what we will do now," and another one replied, "Back in the worst of the depression I was working here for Mr. Welch one day and I saw fifteen men carry away each a turn of corn for bread for his family, and I heard Mr. Welch say to them that he was not charging them anything for the corn."

These are only a very few of the innumerable instances of Mr. Welch's charity that I have observed through the years. Truly may it be said of him that when they were hungry he gave them bread; when they were naked he clothed them; if his neighbors knocked he opened unto them; if they were strangers he took them in; if they were sick he visited them; and if they were in prison he went unto them and ministered to them. Verily, he believed in a benediction of bread instead of words. He believed that a friend in need was a friend indeed; and do you doubt that on yesterday morning at two-fifteen o'clock, as he approached the shore of the dark, mysterious river that divides this world from the next, he heard a voice floating across the mystic waters saying unto him, "Verily, I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.

If there are those among you who think that he had faults, now that the places that once knew him will know him no more, let me suggest to you that if you will spend your time counting his numerous virtues, his fine traits of character, and his generous and helpful deeds, you will find them in such overwhelming numbers that whatever faults he may have had will fade away like the morning dew-drops melting in the light of the rising sun. If he had faults throw the mantle of charity over them—that is what he would have done for you; and charity, after all, is the paramount virtue. All else is as sounding brass and tinkling cymbal. Charity never persecutes nor back-bites. It draws the curtain to hide a neighbor's faults, turns a deaf ear to the tongue of scandal and heals the wounds made by the poisoned arrows of hate. Charity is the Good Samaritan of the heart. It is that which thinketh no evil and is kind; which hopeth all things, believeth all things, endureth all things. It is the Angel of Mercy which forgives seventy and seven times, and still is rich in the treasures of pardon. It visits the sick and those that are in prison; it soothes the pillow of the dying, mingles its tears with those who mourn, buries the dead, and cares for the orphan. It delights to do offices of good to those who are cast down, to relieve the suffering of the oppressed and distressed and to proclaim the gospel to the poor. It is as wide as the world of suffering, deep as the heart sorrow, extensive as the want of creation, and boundless as the kingdom of need. And it was charity such as this that symbolized the life of J. C. Welch.

And so I say, that if my departed friend did have some faults, I believe that already the beautiful, meek-eyed, white-winged Angel of Mercy has dropped upon them a tear of pity and blotted them out forever. And so, my friend, knowing J. C. Welch as I knew him intimately for thirty years, I believe that if St. James correctly defined religion when he said: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and the widows in affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world;" if he was right when he said: "Seest thou how faith wrought with his works, and by works was faith made perfect;" if religion means that we shall visit the sick and those that are in prison; if it means to render aid when and where aid is needed; if it means to render assistance to the poor and the needy, to alleviate the suffering of the oppressed and those in distress, and to lift up the down-trodden and the lowly, then without ostentation or display, without loud speaking or blowing of trumpets, and without vaunting pretensions or hypocritical profession, the every day life of J. C. Welch was a breathing, living religion—a living object-lesson of religion in action, which the best of us may well afford to emulate. And I confidently believe that on yesterday morning at two-fifteen o'clock as his life merged into the mystery and the majesty of death, that He who walked upon the crested waves of the sea and commanded the winds to be still and whispered "Peace" to the troubled waters of Galilee, whispered "Peace" to the soul of your friend and my friend, J. C. Welch.

Weatherby Is Named Head Of Methodist Sunday School Class

Carleton E. Weatherby, high school principal, became president of the Young Peoples class of the Methodist Sunday school, on Tuesday night of last week, when the organization held its annual election in the Sunday school rooms of the church.

W. K. Chandler was named vice president; Miss Mabel Clark secretary and Mrs. Josephine Platt, treasurer. Mrs. Eugene Alley, Mrs. J. G. Huggin, Jr., and Mrs. W. K. Chandler comprise the worship committee, the three to select their own chairman.

Dinner preceded the business session. Rev. Mr. Huggin occupied the chair during the election, but the new president assumed charge then, and officiated during a program of games.

Little did the grandparents of we oldsters think the day would come when girls would do any painting except on china.
