Some Characteristics of A Good Store

- 1 A good store must have a large assortment of saleable merchandise.
- 2 The merchandise must cover a wide range of sizes and colors.
- 3 Styling must be up to the minute.
- 4 While the actual price is not so important, every item must compare competitively and the values must be good.
- 6 A good store has permanence. It does not change. The management and the sales force become your personal friends.
- 7 The fact that a store has stood the stress and storms of the years suggests that it gives the best in merchandise; that it is a good place to trade.
- 8 A good store—for instance—always is anxious to exchange a pair of shoes until the customer is both suited and fitted.

As A Checkup

As a checkup, ask yourself occasionally what store gives you the most for your money. Where in the long run, does it pay to trade?
