"American Mother" Roosevelt Would Revolt Conservative

WASHINGTON .- Political developments indicated this week that President Roosevelt might be a third term candidate in 1940, and almost certainly would bolt any conservative Democratic nomination for the presidency next year.

Public utterances of the President and his political associates added up to this conclusion.

The third term possibility had weekend attention . after the President spoke Friday before the Pau-American union and at Mt. Vernon, Va. The Pan-American address was heavy with forebodings and assertions that the western hemisphere was prepared to defend itself against economic or military attack.

At Mt. Vernon, Mr. Roosevelt spoke sympathetically of George Washington's difficult position, when after ong years of service in the cause of the new nation, he was called from retirement to serve as its first president.

He said he believed Washington would have refused the call if it had been a normal one.

Political observers wondered whether Mr. Roosevelt might not have been thinking of himself.

Some of Mr. Roosevelt's associates are thinking that a crisis-perhaps world war-might keep him in th White House another four years. week in the first of his 1939 series F.
