ALONG POLITICAL FRONTS

ize now that this has been a poor policy, as thousands of the Republican faith, at "loose ends" so to speak, have wished to take part in the affairs of state, and have drifted into the Democratic ranks. But this spring the leaders are trying to bring them all back into the fold. No member of the Republican party, even the most optimistic expects to have a Republican governor in North Carolina, but there is a chance in the re-organization to render a party service, and help in the National campaign.

The Republicans are not doing so bad either in the number of gubernatorial candidates they are getting ready for the race. Four to date have entered on the Republican ticket for this high office. Robert H. McNeill, an attorney of Washington, D. C., Dr. Forest Witten, of Salisbury, John R. Hoffman, of Burlington, and G. C. Pritchard, Asheville attorney, former Congressman, and the last to enter the race. Mr. Pritchard, son of the late Jeter C. Pritchard, native of Madison County, and U. S. Senator, has a wide and prominent acquaintance in North Carolina among members of both political faiths. Those who know the inside of things are of the opinion that there is some significance in the candidates, at least two on such friendly terms, running against each other, than meets the "naked eye."

Democratic candidates are so busy lining up their campaign and publicity managers that the efforts put forth in the name of a would-be-governor, are almost assuming the furor and entanglements of "big business." One thing has been noticeable about the platforms. They are all steering away from the liquor question, which makes in appear that they might consider a "too hot to handle."

In the meantime while the roaring of the coming political fight is heard in the distance in North Carolina, the big guns in the nation are getting ready to fire. President Roosevelt has returned from his trip to Panama, which apparently was not merely a vacation, but to take a look first hand at the security of the Western Hemisphere, and to enroll the Latin American governments in military and naval defense, for what might happen. He is still silent about the third term. William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, starts campaign to seek a half million members in Southern states, and is trying to muddy the waters of large voting areas. Vice President Garner, is said to be discouraged, as he is not making the gains he anticipated.

The courteous learns his courtesy from the discourteous.
