BULLY CALF MAKES BLACKIE LAUGH

Story 56

You know that Jay Bird left Mr. Man's house yesterday to go back to Mountain House and Blackie. It was pretty dark when he got there, and the folks were just going in to supper. They were all mighty glad to see him, and Bettie told them to wait a few minutes till she fixed a place for Jay Bird and popped him some corn. She could hardly cook anything else that he liked as well as popcorn, and she always liked to please him.

When they were all seated at the table, Blackie said: "Well, Jay Bird, I know you had a good time down on the creek, and I want you to tell us all about. What was Uncle Joe doing?"

Jay Bird nearly choked on some popcorn when Blackie asked him that, for he just had to laugh, and he knew that Blackie would choke worse when he told him what Who-Who Owl saw Uncle Joe doing. But he had to tell it, and he did.

When he told him how that black calf had butted Uncle Joe into the fig tree, and how Uncle Joe had pulled himself out and ran for his house. Blackie had his own spell of choking. It was a sight to see him lie back in his big chair and laugh.

Poor Uncle Joe going to get a bearskin off of a little black calf, and not getting anything except a bad butting into a fig tree! Poor Uncle Joe, who had been working all of the summer to make good things for Blackie and his friends to eat, and then to have his own calf butt him into a fig tree and scare him most to death! Blackie said it was sort of a pity, but it was awfully funny, too, and he just had to laugh.

And Jay Bird told them what Uncle Joe had told Mr. Man about being too busy with his crops to do any more hunting for Blackie. But he also told them how glad Uncle Joe was that Aunt Judy gave him the good excuse to let Blackie alone.

"Well, I would like to pat that black calf on the back," said Blackie, "and I want to say right now that I hope none of you will ever do anything to hurt him. He has helped us to get some fun out of Uncle Joe, and so he is our friend from now on. I only wish I could get a good look at him."

"And I want to tell you that he is a friend of mine," said Billy Possum. "Just think what a good time Uncle Joe would have had knowing Billy's bones if that calf hadn't knocked the bucket off that barrel." Blackie asked Jay Bird all about how things were around his creek house, and if he saw any turkeys and geese and ducks. Jay Bird told him that he saw them all, and that he saw lots of bees filling three hollow trees full of honey.

Vegetable Laxative Makes Happy Friends Here's a laxative that usually acts thoroughly as harsher ones but is a gentle persuader for intestines when used this way: A quarter to a half-teaspoonful of spicy, aromatic BLACK-DRAUGHT on your tongue tonight; a drink of water. There's usually time for a good night's rest, with a gentle, thorough action next morning relieving constipation's headaches, biliousness, sour stomach, bad breath. BLACK-DRAUGHT is a splendid combination of vegetable ingredients, chief of which is an "intestinal tonic-laxative" that helps impart tone to lazy bowel muscles. It's economical. 25 to 40 doses: 25c.

"And there is a whole row of new bee-gums over at Aunt Lindy's house," said Jay Bird.

"Yes," said Blackie, "and there is a whole row of black cats over there, too, or there was that day when Rover Dog went hunting for eggs; and so I guess that row of bee-gums will have to stay there as long as the cats stay."

And now the sandman had bit Benny and Jenny in the eyes, and Betty had to take them off to bed. (To be Continued)
