He's Prepared to do his Part!

The thought of preparedness is not new to Bell Telephone workers. In fact, the South's and the nation's vast telephons system is what it is today mainly because preparedness is one of the fundamental principles of the Bell System's policy.

Telephone people are constantly at war with the elements, fire, flood and hurricane. They are prepared in advance to meet the emergency whenever and wherever danger strikes.

Rapidly changing industrial demands—shifting populations—quick expansions in some places and contractions at others—ever-changing problems of supply and demand, are conditions under which all telephone people are accustomed to working.

Years of experience in anticipating, planning for and meeting these exacting demands strengthen the confidence of telephone workers in their ability to provide for the needs of the South and the nation under any conditions that may arise.

New TVA Model Thrasher To Be Used In County

The first economy trailer thrashing machine to be purchased in North Carolina, has recently been bought by Lawson Messer, of White Oak. The machine is an improved model of the T. V. A. thrasher in the county. Any farmer wishing to have his thrashing done may place his orders with Mr. Messer, Cove Creek, or make applications at the county farm agents' office.

This new method of thrashing offers many advantages to the farmers of the county. It takes only five men to operate the thrasher, and since it is a trailer it can be taken anywhere that a car can travel.

The work of thrashing can be done in a much shorter length of time, as well as the saving of time required in preparation for the thrashing.

One of the major advantages over the old system is that the farmer who uses the T. V. A. model need not purchase seed any more, but may save his own. It will thrash any grain, grass, clover, or lespedeza.

As an illustration of its time saving facilities, the thrasher will turn out three bushels of oats per minute, 40 bushels of wheat per hour, and all other grains accordingly.

On A Visit

HARRY M. HALL

now The Waynesville Mountaineer. For three years he was associated with the paper, after which it was sold to the late Jesse Daniel Boone.

In 1915 Mr. Hall went to Newport News, where he held a position with the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, until 1922, when he returned to Waynesville.

Ten years ago he assumed management of the Waynesville Book Company. An authority on heraldry, he also did considerable research work and the painting of coats of arms in his store. Intensely interested in this section and its development, he made many contacts with summer visitors in his store, giving them information about this part of the state.

Mr. Hall is a native of Indianapolis, Ind., the son of the late Harry C. and Cora A. Hall. He is a descendant of Lyman Hall, of Georgia, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. His childhood and early manhood were spent in the states of Kansas, Texas, and New York.

He is an authority on seafaring, and knows the history of the United States Navy from Paul Jones to the present officials. He holds a masters certificate in sailing and steam. He is a graduate of the New York Nautical College, and spent several years on old sailing ships and trade ships, making ports in the West Indies and South America.

At one time he wrote a series of articles for The Waynesville Mountaineer on old sailing ships, which attracted quite a bit of interest. Some of the teachers in the local schools used them in connection with their teaching.

He is also very clever in designing book plates. The book plates now in use in the North Carolina section of the library of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Continental Hall, Washington, D. C., was designed by Mr. Hall. It is said to be one of the most attractive as well as historical book plates in the library.

He has also had a wide experience in the newspaper field. For a number of years he was a reporter on several of the leading publications in New York City.

He first came South to live when he opened a branch office of the Dennison paper company in New Orleans, their initial store in the South.

Mr. Hall is a nephew of the late Louie Howe, secretary and advisor to the President, and said to be responsible for making Franklin D. Roosevelt President of the United States. He was offered a political appointment during the first administration of President Roosevelt, but turned it down. While he was well informed about political affairs he never cared for active participation.

For the past few year Mr. Hall has served as co-operative observer for the United States Weather Bureau. This work has been turned over to Quinby Kipp, manager of the Hotel Gordon who will in the future keep the records.

Mr. Hall will be greatly missed in the community, this winter, for in his quiet manner had made many strong friends during the twenty odd years he has resided here.

Haywood's 2 Draft Boards Preparing For Drawing 29th

assign to him order number two. And so on until every registered man is also given an order number.

At this point, the draft boards will start with order number one, and up to fifty, and send to them a questionnaire to fill out, to be returned in five days. Should the receiver need help, a board to be named will give him assistance without charge.

The questionnaires will be sent out in groups of 50 in order to better carry out the work.

As the local board get back the questionnaires, they begin the task of classification. After going over each questionnaire, the draftee is put into one of four classifications. All men put into classification. A would be given a physical examination, pending an immediate call to service.

Should a man not be satisfied with the classification he is placed in, he can appeal through a local board. If not satisfied then he can go to a state board and then a national board.

National Drawing Set For Tuesday

WASHINGTON—Headed by President Roosevelt, one of the greatest galaxies of Government officials ever to gather prepared today to open the national draft lottery in Washington on October 29.

The lottery, in which 17,000,000 men throughout the nation hold "tickets" good for a year's service in the United States Army, will be launched by a radio address by Mr. Roosevelt.

See Dictator Rap
The nation's Chief Executive is again expected to lash out at the dictator nations of Europe which, he contends, have forced the first peace-time conscription program in the history of this country.

After Mr. Roosevelt's address, according to plans announced by Draft Director Clarence A. Dykstra, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson will draw the first number. Stimson will be blindfolded, just as the then Secretary of War Newton D. Baker was blindfolded when he picked the first number in the World War draft lottery in 1917.

Succeeding numbers will be drawn by "other high Government officials, including members of the Cabinet, Congress and the judiciary," Dykstra said. The latter, it was believed, may include Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes.

15-Hour Job
The lottery itself, which will take from 15 to 20 hours to complete, will be held in the Departmental Auditorium in Washington, a large Government-owned hall standing in the very shadow of the Washington Monument on historic Constitution Avenue.

About 10,000 numbers will be drawn, it was estimated. The numbers will be incased in plastic blue non-transparent capsules, which will be dumped into a large gold-fish bowl.

The goldfish bowl will be the same one used in the World War drawing. It is now a museum piece in Independence Hall in Philadelphia.

Mayor Robert Lamberton, of Philadelphia, told Draft Board officials that he will assign a special detail to bring the bowl here by motorcar.

The convoy will be escorted by Maryland State police as it passes through that state.

Boards Busy
The 6,500 local draft boards throughout the country, aided by flying squads of trouble-shooters sent out from Washington, are now laying the groundwork for the lottery by shuffling and numbering the cards of registrants.

The lottery will tell the registrants which men will be selected first for a year's military training. Some 30,000 men are to be sent into camp by November 18 and 770,000 others by next June.

Lawrence Fullbright Happiest Boy In County Over Canton-Waynesville Score

Lawrence Fullbright is sold on the idea of taking advice from an older brother. That is, he is sold five dollars worth.

Lawrence, a fourth grader at Lake Junaluska, knows a thing or two about football, but not enough to risk his own judgment in naming scores for two teams like Waynesville and Canton.

But little things like that don't matter when an older brother is along who does know.

Lawrence and his brother, after reading of the football contest in last week's issue of The Mountaineer, went to the Farmers Federation got their blanks and started scratching their heads.

Lawrence's brother guessed 13 to 6 in favor of Waynesville, and suggested that Lawrence put down a scoreless tie, which he did.

Neither team were exactly happy over the outcome of the game, but Lawrence was all smiles and would not have had it any other way.

When questioned about his football aspirations he would make no positive statement. In fact he was too busy fingering his $5 check, but did answer us and we found out he is the son of Mr.

He thinks the Waynesville team is a scrappy group of players. There was 241 people who submitted guesses on the score.

Apple Strudel Sounds Good...

Mr. and Mrs. Heinze Submit Recipe, After Reading That It Was Not Common In State

Several weeks ago this newspaper carried a reprint of an editorial from the Rocky Mount Telegram, in which it was pointed out that apple strudel was not a common dish in North Carolina, and for that reason the newspaper failed to see why it should be featured on a Southeastern Fair menu as typical North Carolinian.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Heinze, formerly of New York, and now residing here, are of the opinion that Tar Heels are missing a real treat by not knowing of apple strudel. They pointed out that it was a favorite dish in New York, and while an original German dish, it is eaten by all races of people.

They brought in a recipe for apple strudel, and by way of explanation added that the dough should be rolled real thin on a cloth, and then carefully lifted and stretched until about the thickness of tissue paper, then pour the ingredients on this and then by lifting one corner of the cloth, the dough and ingredients will roll together, resembling a jelly roll. The dough cannot be hand rolled because of its thinness, it was said.

This is then placed in a pan to bake.

Recipe for Apple Strudel
Put about 1 1/2 cups flour into a bowl to two-thirds of a cup of boiling water; put a piece of butter the size of a pecan nut, a pinch of salt and one teaspoon of granulated sugar. When butter is dissolved, add enough cold water to make it lukewarm; there need be about three-fourths cup altogether. Beat one egg, add to flour and add the contents of the cup. The dough has to be somewhat softer than noodle dough. Work with your hands or wooden spoon for about 15 minutes, or until it leaves the sides of the bowl so that it will be ready when you are finished with the dough and cover it on a floured board, leaving it for about one-half hour. The bowl is to be earthen in order to keep the heat in. Then get your apples ready—about two cups—two cups fine bread crumbs (grated preferred), cinnamon, sugar and the melted butter and raisins.
