Mr. and Mrs. Shelton To Observe Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Shelton will keep open house on Saturday afternoon and evening in observance of their fiftieth wedding anniversary, at their home on Pigeon street. Friends are asked to call between 8 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon and from 8 to 10 o'clock in the evening. Attractive invitations have been issued.

Mr. and Mrs. Shelton were married on Sunday afternoon, January 18th, at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, in Helena, S. C. Mrs. Shelton was the former Mrs. Hattie A. Sledge. They recall how they arrived in Asheville in a deep snow and caught a train to Waynesville. At the station they were met by a surrey drawn by the locally famous spotted pony team owned by the late J. P. Swift. Mr. Shelton says there were no paved streets in those early days and the mud and snow were a foot deep from the station to his father's home on Pigeon street.

Mr. and Mrs. Shelton remained in Waynesville for the first three years of their married life. The next three they spent at the Cherokee Indian Reservation, where Mr. Shelton taught agriculture. From Cherokee they went to Sante Fe, New Mexico, where he also taught farming to the Indian boys.

From Sante Fe, they went to Havasupai, in North Arizona, where for two years Mr. Shelton served as superintendent of an Indian reservation. From there they were transferred by the government to the San Juan Training school.

Here Mr. Shelton was made superintendent of the school and reservation and remained for 13 years. From the government records of his service at the school can easily be found the accounts of the results of his remarkable achievements. He developed the school into a modern plant and brought about a great transformation not only with the young Indians, but also the older ones, along the lines of manual training, agriculture, and live stock raising.

Here were spent the most interesting years of his work among the Indians. When he first took over the place there was a rough one-room log cabin for the school, which still stands as a landmark of that period. It was surrounded in a few years by a modern school and executive buildings, and a well developed farm, a necessary part of such a plant.

When he resigned the Indians who had become so much attached to him and Mrs. Shelton showered them with gifts of their own making. Today they treasure their Indian collection, and it is a source of equal pleasure to their friends and visitors. They have set apart one room in their home, where they keep the rugs, pottery, bead work, baskets, and many other Indian crafts.

The present vogue for costume jewelry enhances their collection of 150 bracelets, no two alike, numerous rings and necklaces, fashioned of hand wrought silver. Many of the rugs in the collection are considered museum pieces. The rugs were loaned one time to the management of Grove Park Inn in Asheville for a special social function to create "atmosphere."

Mr. and Mrs. Shelton returned to Waynesville in 1916, and the former became associated actively with E. J. Hyatt, his brother-in-law in what is known as Hyatt and Company, handling building materials and other supplies. He retired from active work a few years ago, but still retains his stock in the company.

Since retiring he has enjoyed to the fullest his hobby, which is the cultivation of flowers, particularly dahlias and gladioli. He has thousands of bulbs of every known variety of each in his extensive gardens. Thousands of persons visiting, and resident in Western North Carolina, visit the grounds of his home on Pigeon street, which was formerly owned by his parents, the late Stephen J. Shelton and Mehala C. Shelton. The house is one of the oldest and most interesting homes in this vicinity.

Since Mr. Shelton's return to Waynesville he has served as U. S. Commissioner, and this takes just enough of his time, with his gardening to fill his days with interests and activities.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Shelton are loved by a large circle of friends and to numerous persons outside of their family connections are affectionately known as "Uncle Will" and "Aunt Hattie."

A Sleep Schedule for Baby, From Infancy Up

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

The very young baby ought to sleep practically all the time when not being fed or bathed; at two or three months, nineteen to twenty hours; at six months he should sleep about twelve hours at night with only one regular interruption at night for feeding. He should also have, both morning and afternoon, a nap of about two hours each period. These naps, which may grow shorter, should continue at the age of a year, with a twelve-hour period at night.

Later the morning nap may grow shorter and shorter until it is finally abandoned at the age of two or so. Thereafter until school interrupts, the afternoon nap is very essential.

Nothing is so essential to good sleeping habits as strict regularity. A variation of fifteen minutes may entirely upset them. A separate bed is important. There should be enough cotton pads and blankets so these articles need never be left wet after the baby's clothing has been changed.

Well Ventilated Room
The temperature of the sleeping room should if possible not be over 60 degrees, but well ventilated without drafts. The windows should be open all night, preferably with a canvas screen. Though there should be no disturbing noises the infant will easily adapt himself to the usual home noises.

After several weeks, sleep out-of-doors may be desirable. Some recommend that the baby should not be out in a temperature much below 40 degrees. In a crowded city, a well ventilated room may be better. If you have followed such a program strictly and your baby does not go to sleep readily, or sleeps restlessly, consult your physician.

Be sure you do not allow yourself to train your baby to expect you to take him up, to take him into bed with you, to lie down with him or beside him, to feed him off schedule, and the like. Most sleep problems in young children grow out of the human frailties of their parents—easy to say, hard to correct in ourselves and just as hard for others whom we advise, to correct. It always was, always will be.

You may have a chart of desirable hours of sleep for the baby by writing me. In like manner you may have a copy of my "Prevention and Correction of Thumb Sucking,"—also a list of my 15 pamphlets on the baby and young child, including the one on sleep.

Solving Parent Problems

A. Write me in care of this paper in the usual fashion and let me send you a list of self-teaching materials in arithmetic suited to your child. Also tell about his particular difficulties.

Double Duty Dress

By VERA WINSTON

SOME OF the nicest clothes lead double lives. Here's a coat-dress which can be worn with a frock underneath or as a dress for street wear when the weather permits. The fabric is good old navy blue serge, that hardy perennial which is now going strong. So-tasse braid with tiny ball edging trims the four curved pockets with straight flap tops. Navy cords with tasseled ends slip through gold rings and one tasseled is tucked into the pocket.
