Farm Questions and Answers

Question: What garden vegetables may be planted in March?

Answer: Many early vegetables may be planted in March. Enough for a family of five with a surplus for canning may be had by following this schedule: radishes and parsley, 50 feet of row; Bloomsdale spinach, 100 feet; garden peas, 400 feet; beets, 200 feet; carrots, 200 feet; onion sets, 100 feet; and Irish potatoes, 400 feet. Strawberries, dewberries, raspberries, grapes, and fruit trees may also be set out as late as March.

Question: What is the best method of planting kudzu?

Answer: Technicians of the Soil Conservation Service point out that the best method is to set the plants in a well-settled plant bed. Dig holes with a mattock or spade deep enough to accommodate the plants. Then place the roots against the firm side of the hole and pack the soil tightly, leaving the top bud level with, or slightly below, the surface of the soil. If the rows are 25 feet apart, space the plants about 3 1/2 feet apart in the row. Around 500 plants to the acre are recommended.

Question: When may baby chicks be allowed to run out-of-doors?

Answer: Roy Dearstyne, head of the State College Poultry Department, says chicks may be turned out as soon as the weather permits. Allow the chicks to stay out only for a while each day in this process of "hardening" them. He also calls attention to another poultry practice that should receive the farmer's attention now, that is, culling. Since a bird consumes about seven pounds of feed a month, all boarder hens should be removed from the flock as soon as possible.
