

Big Picture Of North Carolina National Geographic Magazine

North Carolina's amazing industry in a generation forms background for an article, "Parade," appearing in the August issue of the National Geographic Magazine. The article is by Leonard C. Roy, staff writer for the magazine.

The article covers 44 pages of the magazine, including 45 illustrations, of which 21 are printed in color. In addition a map of the state spreads across several pages. The illustrations show the places of historic interest and North Carolinians at work and play.

The article is one of a series published by the National Geographic Magazine, official publication of the National Geographic Society. Appearance of the article in the magazine means that it reaches more than a million members of the society, the largest of any scientific body in the world, is represented in every country. Nearly 10,000 members of the society live in North Carolina.

Roy was particularly impressed with the industrial wealth of North Carolina, and spent many weeks in the state, inspecting the large factories. At Greensboro, world's largest mills producer, he watched the machinery which normally turns out 100,000 yards a year, and half a million yards each of flannel and print and piece-dyed fabrics. He visited several of the 30 furniture factories at High Point. "The North Carolina furniture industry," he writes, "is one of the largest in the United States. North Carolina now leads all other states in the production of wooden furniture."

At Kannapolis the writer saw the mills which daily convert about 100,000 bales of cotton into tiny baby clothes, bath and beach robes, and pillow cases. He also saw the mills turning out 600,000 pairs of hosiery each year. He saw the giant paper mill where daily 100,000 cords of pine, poplar, oak, chestnut, gum, and cotton are made into thirty kinds of paper, including stock for one-cent stamps. This latter also produces turpentine and rosin.

Roy found that one chemical factory at Greensboro printed its catalogs in fourteen languages, and had plants normalizing in England, Ireland, Chile, Brazil, Argentina, New Zealand, Australia, and South America.

The article emphasizes the extent of the state's highway system. The writer, in his tour, noted the vast acreage devoted to tobacco, but still was able to learn that North Carolina employs half a million people most of the year, was the greatest tobacco growing state in the Union.

"Three tobacco companies operating large plants in the state each use more than a quarter of a million dollars' worth of revenue stamps every working day," he writes. "Do you wonder that North Carolina is the fourth ranking state in the payment of taxes to Uncle Sam? I saw hundreds of machines each producing more than 1,200 cigarettes a minute. Other machines packed them at the rate of 120 packs a minute."

North Carolina's participation in the defense program appealed to Mr. Roy, who notes in his article that the bulk of Wilmington's seaborne trade now is gasoline from Texas: "More than one hundred silvery tanks holding 65,000,000 gallons spread along the Cape Fear River bank in and below the city. Wilmington built ships for the World War and is playing a similar role in the defense program today. On a 70-acre site nine ways have been built where 37 steel cargo ships of 7,500 tons each will be assembled by 1943."

In connection with the defense work, he visited Fort Bragg: "A year ago its population was 5,000; Fayetteville's about 20,000," the article states. "Last winter 24,000 workmen began thrusting roads through pine forests and flanking them with buildings at the rate of one every 32 minutes. The military population has swelled to more than 65,000. It is the largest military reservation in the United States—about 25 miles long and 10 miles wide.

"Early spring brings throngs of garden visitors here (Wilmington) the writer points out. He mentions the famous Orton plantation. "A Hollander told me he bought a ten acre plot in 1920," says the article. "Now he owns outright 100 acres. 'We raise 27 different crops, and ship as many as 10,000 dozen daffodils, 5,000 dozen irises and 2,500 dozen gladioli in a day,'" the grower told Mr. Roy. "We also produce a quarter of a million bulbs over those used for next year's crop."

The article in its sweep from the coast to the Tennessee border gives many interesting highlights. "Produce is often sold at auction, as is tobacco. At Faison I saw buyers from northern cities bidding on corn, cantaloupes, string beans and cucumbers, while an auctioneer chanted. A buyer from Washington, D. C., grocery chain showed me a day's order for 5,000 dozen ears of corn. One hundred and fifty thousand bushels of cucumbers grown in this region move direct from vines to a local pickle plant."

As the author of an article in the Geographic in recent years on the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, the writer took advantage of the opportunity again to visit the park, and he devotes con-

Piedmont Dance For Younger Set Wednesday Night

The "Mid-Summer Frolic," outstanding dance of the season for the younger set, will be held at the Piedmont Hotel on Wednesday the 13th, under the management of Tom Lytle, of Asheville, and student at the University of North Carolina. The affair is expected to attract guests from the neighboring towns and camps as well as local residents and summer visitors.

Rodney Bryson's orchestra of twelve pieces has been secured for the evening. The group has been engaged for the Saturday night dance at Biltmore Forest Country club for the summer season.

Rodney Bryson is a student at Oak Ridge Military Institute and has had a wide experience in playing for dances and has selected the members of his group with great care. Those who have heard them state that the boys can give their music just the right swing for the current dance steps.

The dance has been especially planned for the younger set, with all college groups, high school students, campers from this section, and tourists in town.

Mrs. R. O. Covington and J. Dale Stentz will serve as chaperones for the dance.
