

The Greenville Tobacco Market

Opens December 8th

High Prices Are Not Only Expected To Rule For This Crop, But Also For the 1943 and 1944 Crops.

Although, due to favorable handling weather, over half of the crop will be ready for market at its opening, there is no reason to rush to sell and cause to put tobacco on any floor a week to ten days and have it drift in quality as a result of exposure before sold.

Two Daily Sales Prevent Such Exposure On The Greenville Market

The war has caused much shifting of tobacco forces. However, Greenville being an ESTABLISHED MARKET, both small and large manufacturers, as heretofore, will be represented, assuring strong competition on all grades. In this connection, the following is copied from a recent issue of the Southern Tobacco Journal:

Multiple Buying

"To reduce buying expenses it is common practice for Companies to place buying orders . . . this is especially true on the smaller markets.

"Thus a company, instead of incurring the expense of maintaining ITS OWN BUYER on a certain market, places a buying order with a LEAF DEALER who has a buyer at that market.

"This buyer bids not only on behalf of his employer, but possibly half a dozen other companies.

"Were it not for the multiple buying orders it is probable that many of the smaller markets would cease to operate, and the existing trend toward elimination of small markets would be more pronounced.

"Viewed alone, multiple buying may become an abuse which is hurtful to the interests of the growers by reason of the fact that competition in buying is diminished."—Southern Tobacco Journal.

Due to war conditions multiple buying during the duration will increase on the smaller markets and the grower having more than an acre should bear that fact in mind, and if not a too long haul, sell it on an ESTABLISHED Market.

The Re-drying, Stemming and Storage Plants are located at Greenville. Help conserve gas and rubber by selling direct on the Greenville market.

Tune in on WWNC 7:30 A. M.—and WNOX at 12:10 for the Tobacco market report.

THE GREENEVILLE TOBACCO BOARD OF TRADE

THE WAYNE MURDER CASE

By ARTHUR HOERL

A BELL-VOH
"I suppose you're tryin' to hint that me bein' a sailor did the tying. Well, you're crazy!" Dale appeared to disregard Boulter's words. He turned to Wilfred Sands as though he suddenly remembered something.
"Now I understand what that warning note meant! You next! This murder was already done and Miss Gloria is spotted as the next victim. Lo you think you'd better tell Jardin to stick close to her?"
"That's not a bad thought, Dale." His next words were whispered to Captain Blake, who left the room.
"Come on, what've you got to say about me tying that knot?" asked Boulter almost belligerently.
"Say are you the only sailor in the world? All I said was that it that it took a sailor to tie and untie one like that."
"If you fellows wasn't so busy trying to find out who killed the old man you'd have the right one asked up long ago."
"Whom do you suggest?" asked Sands.
"Suggest? I know. It couldn't be anybody else except that young Bob Wayne. I heard what went on this afternoon. The girl's room is right next to the one old Wayne put us in. Early this afternoon that fellow Claude comes into the room and starts makin' love to her. From what they said he must've been makin' a habit of it. Anyway, pretty soon I hear Bob Wayne go into the room. There was a terrible argument between the two lads. I heard Bob say that he'd kill Claude if he ever put a hand to the girl again. Claude then said something I didn't catch, but it made the older youngster mad enough to kick Claude right out of the room. There was so much commotion that the old man heard it and came out of the library. Then him and Bob had a row. That's when he told Bob what he was going to get in his will. What he told the old man then was plenty. I guess he would've liked to make it stronger only Gloria was present. Anyway, he did say that any man ought to be dead before he did a thing like that. The old man laughed with that crazy laugh of his and told the boy that he would have the girl even after he was dead.
"There's the whole thing—open an' shut like a log book. What could be plainer than that Bob Wayne kills the uncle first before he can sign that paper and then, to get even with his cousin, makes a complete job of it?"
"Sounds plausible, doesn't it, chief?" queried Dale.
Sands made no reply. Dale turned to Boulter again.
"That being the case tell us how Bob Wayne killed his uncle."
"Say, you'll have to figure that out for yourself. I just give you the facts. You're detectives, you ought to know how it was done."
"Why not get Bob Wayne up here and question him, chief?" Sands nodded. He remained in the library while Dale descended the stairs with Boulter. He returned with Robert Wayne and Captain Blake. Under questioning Robert Wayne confirmed everything that Boulter had told. In some instances he even went further as to detail, but none of it shed any more light on the subject than Boulter's recital had. Finally Robert was dismissed and Sands, Blake and Dale were left alone.
"How do you figure it, Captain?" asked Sands when they knew Wayne was out of earshot.
"Well, there was a lot of truth to Boulter's story, and you see young Wayne confirmed it in every detail. He certainly had plenty of reason to get rid of the old man. Having gone that far he probably figured he might just as well get his revenge on Claude Wayne."
"But what about the warning

Gloria received. He surely wouldn't attempt to harm her."
"Nothing's happened to her, has it? He might have figured it was a clever way to divert suspicion from him."
"Dale, what's your idea? Come to any conclusion about it yet?"
"There are still a couple of very vague points. I have a theory but I'd rather have it confirmed by learning a few more important things before I expound it. And how do you figure it, chief?"
"Personally, I'm inclined to follow the way you led, Dale. You called the turn on Stephen Boulter. That business with the knot was pretty conclusive to me. I'm pretty sure Boulter is the man. But even if we were sure who it was the difficult job is to prove it."
"When we're sure of the guilty one I think it's going to be very easy to prove it—so easy, in fact, that the culprit won't even deny the guilt."
"That's very optimistic, Dale."
"No. It's like that. The guilty one will be so surprised that you have discovered how the crime was committed that there will not even be a thought of denial."
At that moment there came from below the sound of a heavy crash as though some huge piece of furniture had been overturned.
The three men were downstairs before the commotion had ceased.
When they burst into the living room it was still shrouded in darkness. Finally light flooded the room. Jardin stood at the switch. Mr. Sheen and Dr. Bailey were on the lounge. Robert Wayne stood in the center of the room. Sarah Boulter was clinging in terror to her husband in a far corner of the room. Gloria was not in sight.
A slight groan was heard and a movement behind the lounge. Robert Wayne sprang quickly to it and as Miss Sheen and Dr. Bailey pulled up young Wayne frantically stood the lounge aside. On the floor behind it lay Gloria, a gag in her mouth which she was weakly trying to loosen and stuck in the floor beside her was a knife.
"That's the same knife that killed Silas Wayne!" Captain Blake spoke the words in a low tone to the district attorney.

MATERNITY

TWO!

WHO?

YOU!

YOU!

ELMER'S pop-eyed surprise is perfectly natural. Twins! An unexpected double order of happiness from heaven!
A lot of other folks are being pleasantly surprised these days to discover that they're getting a double order of electric service, too.
Actually, the average American home enjoys twice as much electricity for its money as it did 10 to 15 years ago. Perhaps you haven't realized this in your own home because you kept adding new appliances and using more electricity all the time the rates were coming down.

But that's the kind of bargain in which America leads the world. It is made possible by the experienced men and women of your electric company - and by practical business management under public regulation.
This is the American system of free enterprise at work. This is a prime part of what we're fighting for today. It has lifted power production and munitions production to tremendous heights. It will help win the war and enrich the peace.
