Proportions For Canning Made By Government

With 18 million or more Victory Gardens growing, many a home-maker will have homegrown tomatoes, berries, and other garden food for summer meals, and now and again some over for canning. In local markets, also, there may be at times some fruit or vegetable sufficiently abundant, fresh, and reasonably to attract home-makers on the lookout for food to put up.

For home canners, it's useful to learn to judge how far a garden surplus or food in market will go in filling jars. Home economists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture say:

Learn to know what can be done with small quantities, as well as large. This year especially it's well worthwhile to put up even three or four jars at a time, always provided you have the right equipment for canning. On the basis of blue ration stamps needed for commercially canned foods, every jar of home-canned food represents a saving in ration points. . . besides all the other advantages of storing up summertime food for winter.

To help thrifty home-makers figure how many jars of canned food to expect from fruits or vegetables as bought or picked, the home economists offer the following table—with the reminder that such figures can be only approximate:

- Home Canning Arithmetic
- Apples—1 bu. (50 lb.) cans 20 qt. 2 1/2 lb. (7 to 8 apples) can 1 qt.
- Beans, snap—1 bu. (24 lb.) cans 16 qt. 1 1/2 lb. can 1 qt.
- Berries—24-qt. crate cans 18 qt. 1 1/2 to 1 3/4 lb. (5 cups) can 1 qt.
- Cherries—1 bu. (56 lb.) cans 25 qt. 1 1/2 to 2 1/2 lb. (6 to 8 cups) can 1 qt.
- Corn—1 bu. (72 lb.) cans 8 to 9 qt. whole kernel 6 to 10 ears can 1 qt.
- Greens—1 bu. (12 lb.) cans 5 to 7 qt. 2 to 2 1/2 lb. can 1 qt.
- Peaches—1 bu. (50 lb.) cans 20 qt. 2 to 2 1/2 lb. (8 to 10 peaches) can 1 qt.
- Pears—1 bu. (32 lb.) cans 12 to 16 qt. 2 to 2 1/2 lb. can 1 qt.
- Strawberries—24-qt. crate cans 12 qt. 2 qt can 1 qt.
- Tomatoes—1 bu. (56 lb.) cans 15 qt. 2 1/2 to 3 1/2 lb. (8 to 10 tomatoes) can 1 qt.
