SEPARATE PEACE

A conceited American soldier landed in England. He boasted so much of what he would do to the enemy that his chain decided to take a rise out of him.

One morning he received a wire from a famous general. "Glad to know you're over here. We need men like you!"

He showed the telegram to everyone, and pinned it up where all could read it.

The next day he got another, even more important than the first. "Britain is proud to welcome you to her shores. King George VII."

Still unsuspecting, he showed his second wire round the barracks. But he smelt a rat when the third arrived. "Goering says he will resign unless you do. How much to remain neutral?—Hitler."

Servant Problem Mrs. Jones—We once kept a maid for a whole week! Mrs. Smith—How did you ever do it?

Mrs. Jones—We lived in the top floor of a 10-story apartment house. The elevator was out of order and the maid wouldn't walk!

TOONERVILLE TROLLEY

Conductor—No smoking, sir. Passenger—I'm not smoking. Conductor—I've got a pipe in your mouth. Passenger—I've got shoes on my feet, too, but I'm not walking!

Only to Drink! Jimmy—You know a camel can go a week without water! Johnny—So could I if Maw would let me!

Same Difference Harry—That's just the way it happened. I woke up one morning and found myself famous. Jerry—It was different with me. I found myself famous and then I woke up!

Correct Dad—Do you know what happens to liars when they die? Son—Yes. They lie still!

Aren't They All? Harry—So your girl is temperamental. What do you mean by that? Jerry—Ninety-nine per cent temper and one per cent mental.

Marital Bliss Suitor—Do you believe in long engagements? Dad—Yes. I think a young couple should be as happy as long as possible.

Early Talker! Pat—Where were you born? Mike—I was born in Dublin. Where were you born? Pat—I was born three miles from Dublin. I could have been born there if I had only said so!

WELL BROADCAST

Bill—Did you ever do any public speaking? Joe—I'll say. I proposed to a girl in the country on a party line!

Universal Trouble Boss—You want another raise. Why don't you live within your means? Worker—I do, but I'm getting awfully crowded for space.

Bit of Dionne Uncle—Is your mother generous with you children? Sonny—Too generous! There are ten of us now and we're expecting another any time.

Stock or Stuck Boss—Quick, get me my broker. Secretary—Yes, sir. Stock or pawn?

Easy Riches Harry—I just burned up a hundred dollar bill. Jerry—You must be a millionaire. Harry—No, it just seemed easier to burn it than pay it.

Missing Her Chance Dad—Always think before you speak, daughter. Daughter—But, by the time I do that, the boys have changed the subject.

Love at Last Him—Do you think you could learn to love me? Her—Perhaps. But wouldn't you hate to think you were an acquired taste?

Right Name? Teacher—Who can tell me the names of the first man and woman? Sonny—Adam and Evil.

Rationed Traffic Driving Inspector—Now, lady, what is the white line in the middle of the road for? New Driver—For bicycles!
