

Cherry Outlines Program For The General Assembly

come out strong against any new taxes and for holding unchanged (for the most part) the present tax structure. Tax structure changes suggested were to make drugs used by doctors and patients exempt from tax, and permitting the income tax structure to exempt expenses for medical care, funerals, and of children in school. He will advocate continuing the war bonus for teachers and state employees.

Education

Turning to education he will suggest an eight-point program to strengthen the public school system. He wants: a base pay of $125 per month for A-grade teachers just starting in the profession; an expanded program of vocational training; free text books through eighth grade and rental fees on high school books only high enough to maintain the rental system; 10 months pay for principals to provide for time on the job before school opens and after it closes; raising compulsory attendance age from 14 to 16 years; a program of additional compensation for exceptional teachers; state aid in supplying better sanitation facilities in connection with schools; and better fiscal control of public school funds.

Governor Cherry will also recommend "adequate provision" of funds for higher education institutions. He will point out future highway needs and when men and materials are available he wants all-weather roads for all communities. He also will urge further uses of the by-products of agriculture in the state and the development of new products and a better program of training for the boys and girls who will run the farms of tomorrow.

Veterans

The address will also call for supplying the needs of 300,000 war veterans who will return to the state. This should be cared for from the postwar reserve fund—"when the needs of the veterans can be determined."

The Governor claims that a grateful state should provide new educational opportunities for these men and women and should acquaint them with their rights. The children of those who gave their lives in battle are deserving of ample protection at the hands of the state.

Concerning the veterans the Governor advocates: "We cannot merely see that he gets his discharge pay, a parade, and a few days of glory and applause. We must make him one of us again."

Turning to the state's health program, Governor Cherry will agree in principal with a report made by the commission named to study the problem of health in the state. This group has proposed a state-wide program of hospital and medical care. He will call for further advances in the field of health and ask for appropriations to wage a more complete war on disease.

The Governor will also advocate: A strong department of conservation and development; better care of the state's less fortunate; adequate representation of labor on all state commissions and boards
