Pvt. Cagle Serving With Distinction On Leyte

Pvt. Lloyd L. Cagle, son of Mrs. Margaret Cagle, of Waynesville, R.F.D. No. 2, is serving with the First Cavalry Division on Leyte. It has been a dangerous assignment, where bridges are built under fire and the hard working men depend on machine gunners like Pvt. Cagle to protect them, according to information received from headquarters of the area.

On one wide and swift stream, the engineers worked for three hectic hours under fire. From above, they were harassed by constant air attacks. From the nearby hills, they were under constant sniper fire. But the men worked with confidence, for they knew that the machine gunners were holding off the enemy. So well did they do their job that not one man was lost. On those occasions that there are no attacks, the machinegunners become construction men and help construct the bridges.

Before entering the service on Sept. 12, 1942, Pvt. Cagle was engaged in farming near Waynesville.
