By THOMPSON GREENWOOD

L. Gwyn of Waynesville, marketing specialist at the State Department of Agriculture, probably knows more about the cattle market than anybody else in the State. He advises farmers to avoid marketing too much of their product at the end of the year, when the quotas are being filled. Farmers get lower prices for their product until month's end, he says. The buyers don't want the good advice from in Broughton's law practice and will be in there pitching when he runs for the U. S. Senate in 1948.

NO ARREST — Lt. Gov. L. Y. Ballentine may be surprised to see this in the paper, but it actually happened a little while back on a highway which skirts Durham, but is nevertheless in the Durham city limits.

As the Durham policeman tells it, he saw this car moving along at about 32 miles an hour, seven miles faster than the law allows in Durham. After clocking the speed for a minute or two, he blew for the automobile to pull to the curb. He told the driver that he was exceeding the speed limit. Oh, no, the driver replied — only about 32 miles an hour. Well, you are in the city limits! You've got me then, asserted the driver.

The policeman asked the man for his driver's license. The driver could not find it, discovered he had left it in his other pants. You've got me again, he said.

What's your name? L. Y. Ballentine (he didn't tell me he was Lieutenant Gov. nor nothing). Well, you get a statement from the highway folks saying you have a license. And I'll let you off this time. The policeman received a note from Boddie Ward, head of the State Motor Vehicles division, saying that Lt. Gov. Ballentine had a driver's license. And that was that.

But if you were Lieutenant Governor and had been stopped by a traffic cop, wouldn't you have told him in a minute? Course you would.
