raiding enemy barracks, blowing up bridges and disrupting important line of Nazi communications.

It was on an early winter morning of last December that Chappel parachuted into German controlled Italian territory.

And from then on it was "kill or be killed" for Captain Chappel. And he killed Germans with mortars, machine guns—and on one occasion even with his bare hands.

At one time he and two of his companions were moving through enemy lines hidden in a truck load of tobacco cases.

They were almost caught—almost. The Germans stopped and searched the truck but it was far too much trouble to move the large case just over Chappel and his two comrades-in-arms.

And Chappel escaped. It was like living on borrowed time—and time was running short.

But not quite short enough. He lived to see the day of victory and today, 26-year-old Chappel is back home.

He has just received the Silver Star award for helping write another chapter in the fighting story of American men and American history.

The testimony on lack of any special defense against atomic bombs came from Secretary of War Patterson and Dr. Vannevar Bush, head of the office of scientific research and development. Both testified before a joint military-commerce sub-committee of the Senate which is considering legislation to set up a national scientific foundation.

Timely, Practical Household Suggestions by Ruth Currant of State College

It's the women who spend the family income—or at least a great portion of it. There is the job of budgeting and household management. They should take this job seriously. They should buy wisely and intelligently. One of the important things in buying is to "look for the label" and read carefully every word written thereon.

Many food manufacturers are now actively at work on a campaign of descriptive labeling. These descriptive labels identify products in detail for the consumer. They tell her what the ingredients are and what special qualities are offered—it's all there in black and white. The important thing is that we read this information and use it.

If your rugs have a tendency to curl at the edges, sew weights or discarded rubber fruit jar rings on the under side to keep rugs flat. If you polish floors with a rubbing wax, spread a thin, even coat of wax and rub it thoroughly. Better still, buy non-skid wax.

If you provide a place for toys, you will find it easier to teach your children to pick up after themselves, thus eliminating a tripping hazard.

Keep walking pathways clear. Short light cord prevents tripping. If you use kerosene lamps or candlesticks, be sure they have wide bases. Metal lamps are safer than glass.

Any weak or rickety chair is a menace. Keep furniture in repair. Anchor small rugs.

LOGANSPOUT, IND.—Wallace Frettinger lost his watch and didn't know where to find it. After looking all through the house and retracing all the steps he remembered taking since the watch disappeared, Frettinger suddenly recalled he'd been trimming trees. He climbed a tree and there was the watch, lodged in the fork between a branch and the trunk.
