Serving in Pacific

Sergeant Willis C. Beck, son of Rev. and Mrs. O. J. Beck of Balsam road, who volunteered in the U. S. Marine Corps, on Oct. 6, 1942, and took his boot training at Parris Island served on the Bennington, which was among the mighty fleet anchored in Tokyo Bay for the Japanese surrender.

After receiving his training at Parris Island he was sent to Portsmouth, Va. to Sea School, and from there was assigned to duty on board the aircraft carrier Bennington on August 6, 1944.

The Bennington was one of five fast carrier task groups. With it as the ship left Ulithi in February of this year were carriers, Hornet, Wasp, and Belleau Wood, and the battleships Massachusetts and Indiana and several cruisers and destroyers.

The Bennington launched its planes as part of the first carrier "strikes" against Tokyo. A few days later the Bennington planes raided Chichi Jima and furnished close air support for the two Jima invasions. They struck mighty blows against Tokyo airfields and made raids against airfields and installations on Okinawa, Ie Shima and against shipping off Miyako. It helped sink a Jap convoy in the East China Sea.

The Bennington furnished close air support for the landing on Okinawa and continued missions over the island and adjacent areas. The ship later during the month of August was approximately 150 miles off Tokyo and launched strikes in the Mito area on the airfields. This activity continued until the Japs had officially accepted the Potsdam peace terms.

In a letter to his parents dated Sept. 15, Sgt. Beck described a trip he had had with his commanding officer to Tokyo, in which he told of the destruction of the area.

Sgt. Beck who served first as a gunner Marine Deb, was promoted to his present rank aboard his ship after leaving the States.
