OLD ENOUGH TO FIGHT BUT NOT TO HANDLE SHELLS

Jack Baker, 20, of Hagerstown, Md., wanted to buy some shells of the firearms counter of a department store. When he was asked his age, the clerk in dignified tones told Jack that he couldn't buy cartridges. "We cannot sell to children," he announced, "you might get hurt." He wasn't quite so dignified, though, when Jack informed him that he had just been discharged after three year's service in the army. You see, you never can tell.

WAITER? WHAT IS MY IQ, PLEASE

Maurice Martelle is a headwaiter in the picturesque city of New Orleans. He is also a connoisseur of patrons, and you'd better watch out. Martelle has a list of rules that must not be violated or you will step outside the inner circle. For instance: Don't smoke on a dance floor. Don't draw on the table cloth. Don't (my goodness no!) whistle or wave at the waiter. Like the good old summer time, he'll be back. Don't write telephone numbers anywhere but in your little black book. And, above all else, don't get in Martelle's critical note book.

CONTACT: FROM NEW YORK TO BERMUDA BY AIR

The first commercial landplane service between New York and Bermuda will go into operation soon, according to Pan American World Airways. DC-24 36-passenger transports will be used on the scheduled twice-weekly Bermuda flights, the company said.

ONE GOOD TURN DESERVES ANOTHER

Should you be so unfortunate as to decide to go to jail, there would be an inducement if you selected either the Utah State prison or the Wyoming State penitentiary. For the Utah prisoners will sleep comfortably under blankets made by the Wyoming folk at the penitentiary and the Wyoming aggregation will enjoy food canned by the Utah inmates. Nice going!

TAINT FUNNY TO THE OWNER

There wasn't anything funny about it to Mrs. J. J. Donovan of Casper, Wyo., when she went out the next morning after leaving her washing on the line over night, to find that some one had painted the pillow slips black.

A People Oppressed

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Jan. 6 is Exodus 1-5, the Memory Verse being Exodus 3:12. "And He said, Certainly I will be with thee.")

LONG AFTER Joseph's death, when he and the Pharaoh whose trusted servant he was, were long gone, the Jewish people, living mostly in Goshen where the land was fertile, multiplied with such rapidity that the reigning Pharaoh was troubled, fearing, he said, that in case of a war, this people would fight on the side of the enemy. There was no justification for such a fear.

He "made their lives bitter with hard bondage," building store or treasure cities for him. Still the Hebrews multiplied, and the Pharaoh then told the midwives that when a Hebrew woman gave birth to a son the midwife should kill the baby. The midwives did not obey, and when asked why they did not, they said the Hebrew women gave birth to their babies quickly, before the midwife arrived.

Next Pharaoh decreed that the mothers should drown their boy babies in the river. This is the first recorded instance of national anti-Semitism, which has plagued the world for so many years.

One Hebrew mother saved her baby by making an "ark" or basket of bulrushes or papyrus plant, which the Egyptians used to make light, swift boats. She daubed it with slime and pitch, put the baby in, and laid it in the reeds that grew by the river bank. He was three months old when his mother did this. His sister stood near to see what became of the child.

Princess Finds Child
Pharaoh's daughter, coming with her women to the river to bathe, heard him cry and had him brought to her. Recognizing that he was one of the Hebrew children, she yet resolved to save him. His sister asked the princess if she should get a Hebrew woman to nurse the child, and she consented, so the baby's own mother cared for him until his adopted mother took him, naming him Moses, "because I drew him out of the water."

So was this great man saved to lead his people out of the land where they were enslaved. As he grew to manhood he saw how burdened his people were, and one day he saw an Egyptian strike a Hebrew, and looking about to see that he was not observed, he killed the man, hiding his body in the sand. Then he fled to Midian, where he aided the priest's daughters when they were driven away by shepherds from watering their "other" flocks. He stayed with this priest and his family, and married one of the daughters, Zipporah.

One day when Moses was tending his father-in-law's sheep, he saw a bush that flamed, but did not burn. He stopped to watch such a strange sight, when God called to him out of the burning bush, telling him that He had seen the sorrows of His people and Moses was to go to Pharaoh and ask him to let the Israelites go three days' journey into the wilderness to sacrifice to their Lord.

Told to Take Brother Aaron
Moses said he was not the man to persuade the Pharaoh or the people of Israel to go with him, and finally the Lord told him to take his brother, Aaron, who was a good talker, and they could work together. Moses complained that no one would believe him when he said he was sent from God, so God told him to throw his rod on the ground, and when he did so it turned into a serpent. Then God said, "Put forth thine hand, and take it by the tail," and when Moses did so it became again a rod. Then he was told to put his hand into his bosom, and as he drew it forth it was white with leprosy. Again putting it in and withdrawing it, it was as the rest of his flesh. These wonders would prove that the Lord was directing him.

Moses took his "family" and went back to Egypt and told Aaron all these things and did the signs before the people, and they believed what he said. The two then went to Pharaoh and asked that the people should be allowed to go three days' journey into the desert to sacrifice unto their Lord, but he would not allow it. In fact, he punished them for even thinking of going away by taking away the straws with which they made bricks, making them go out to get their own. He demanded that they make the same number of bricks as before they had to go out and find their own straw.

Suffering from this new burden, the people complained bitterly to Moses and Aaron, and Moses "returned to the Lord and said, Lord, wherefore hast thou so evil entreated this people? why is it that Thou hast sent me? "For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in Thy name, he hath done evil to this people; neither hast Thou delivered Thy people at all."

How the Lord answered Moses, how his faith was restored, and what He did next must be left to another lesson.
