WILLIAM HOWARD TAFT WAS THE ONLY MAN TO BE BOTH CHIEF EXECUTIVE AND CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE UNITED STATES

YOU'RE TELLING ME!

By WILLIAM RITT
Central Press Writer

SALES FOLK, urges a store executive, should greet potential customers with a big smile—but not one of amusement.

Perhaps the weather may have something to do with it but we've noticed little talk lately of shirt sleeve diplomacy.

The Germans are now producing synthetic eggs. To be consumed, we imagine, with several strips of plastic bacon.

There is a possibility, we read, that one of our aircraft carriers may be turned over to the Chinese Navy. In that event, Zadok Dumkopf wonders, will our Oriental allies rename it the Wun Long Hop?

Calendar reform in the news again. Grandpappy Jenkins is in favor of it if it provides five pay-days per month.

The Arabs are criticizing the United States Senate. The Desert Song, it seems, has struck a sour note.

Glaciers, according to Factographs, advance at the rate of an inch a century. When riding one a passenger has plenty of time to look around and enjoy the scenery.

Great Wall Failed to Stabilize Chinese Border

China's Great Wall was built over 2,000 years ago to protect north China from warlike Mongols and to stabilize the frontier between nomad and farmer. It failed to do either. Under the ruthless Genghis Khan (1167-1224) Mongol hordes carved out an empire which, under his grandson, the fabulous Kublai Khan of Marco Polo's day, stretched from Poland to the Pacific and from India to the Arctic.

Recent years have witnessed a reversal of history, for a peaceful northward "invasion" of Inner Mongolia by Chinese farmers has been taking place. Of the estimated five million population, about four million are Chinese. They farm the better-watered areas or live as merchants in the few towns like Wanchuan, important meeting place of railroad and caravan routes in Chahar province. Chinese farms produce mainly wheat, millet, beans buckwheat and oats.

The Mongols, divided into tribes called "khans" or "banners", and ruled by hereditary leaders, roam the wide grasslands in a constant search for new pasturage. Grass is indirectly their staff of life, for the sheep, horses, camels and cattle which feed on the grass are the nomad's sole support. Milk, butter and cheese are the chief foods of his unbalanced diet. Animals provide food, clothing, transportation, bartering power and fuel for him. The importance of grass is seen in the favorite Mongol greetings: "Is the pasturage with you rich and abundant?" and "Has rain fallen in your neighborhood?"

Higher Butterfat Yield Boosts Dairyman's Return

On the basis of figures obtained in dairy-herd-improvement associations in 1944, a dairyman owning a herd of 20 cows with an average butterfat production of approximately 200 pounds will have a total income over feed costs of $1,500, or 20 times $75, the difference in the value of the milk sold and cost of feed.

If his herd had an average production of 300 pounds of butterfat per cow, the dairyman's total income over feed cost would be $2,880 (20 times $144). A herd of 20 cows with an average production of 400 pounds would yield a total income over feed cost of $4,160.

Eight cows with an average butterfat production of 400 pounds would yield a greater total income over feed cost than 20 cows averaging only 200 pounds per cow.

Sharkskin First Abrasive

The first abrasive in sheet form was shark skin originally used in the 12th century, comments "The Painter and Decorator." The Chinese, a hundred years later, attached powdered sea shells to parchment with natural gums to make a crude sandpaper. Later the Swiss used ground glass coated to a hide for wood finishing. Sand and glass were glued to paper on a commercial scale in England about 300 years ago and in 1825, the first sandpaper factory was established in this country, making glass-coated sandpaper. Abrasive grains used today are not sand but crystalline (silicon carbide), aluminum (aluminum oxide), and others. All of these synthetic abrasives are products of the electric furnace and in hardness approach that of the diamond.

Indian Summer

Indian summer is the period of warm weather which occurs with more or less regularity each autumn. Its time of occurrence, however, is extremely erratic and its duration variable. In this country it usually comes in late October or early November. The atmosphere is hazy, there is a redness in the sky and an absence of rain. A similar condition of weather is frequently observed in central Europe. One explanation of the name here is that American Indians took advantage of the warm spell following the early autumn frosts for harvesting their corn. Another reason given is that Indians, who did not attack the colonies in severe weather, were afforded another opportunity to make war on the settlers. Daniel Webster said early colonists used the name because they ascribed its peculiar features of heat and haze to the burning of the prairies by the Indians at that time.

Protect Furs

Don't let your furs get wet if it can be avoided; but if they do, hang them in a cool, dry place for drying—never near a heat outlet or fireplace. If your coat has been badly wetted several times, it is best to take it to the cleaner. See your cleaner if you notice the slightest sign of moths. A professional cleaning will kill all forms of moth life, eggs and larvae and will prevent damage to the fur. A good practice is to shake your coat gently both before and after each wearing to fluff out the fur. Protect it from sunlight, which is one of the worst enemies of furs. Have your fur coat cleaned at least once a year, preferably before it is stored in the spring. A reliable cleaner will give it a thorough inspection, pointing out its condition in order to protect himself from responsibility for damages not his fault that might be claimed later.

Mulching Garden

Mulching the vegetable garden will help conserve the moisture in the soil, keep plants from drying out and aid in keeping down weed growth.

Power Aids Farm Operation
One kilowatt-hour of electricity will pump 1,000 gallons of water from the average farm well. It will milk 30 cows, heat five gallons of water, grind 100 bushels of grain, run a tool grinder for four hours, shell 30 bushels of corn, cool 10 gallons of milk, or cut one ton of ensilage and elevate it into a 30-foot silo.
