Specialist Gives Advice On Poultry

The following suggestions for poultry raisers during the month of April are made by C. F. Parrish, who is in charge of poultry of the State Extension Service:

Picking Habit in Chicks. Many chick raisers are troubled extensively with the picking habit after chicks become several weeks old. There may be several causes of this trouble, but the chief ones are crowding and overheating. If crowding is avoided and the chicks brooded as cool as possible to not cause crowding and picking, the picking habit can be reduced considerably or prevented. The addition of one or two per cent of table salt to the mash for two or three days helps stop many picking cases. Sometimes green feed aids materially in controlling picking.

Blow-outs in Layers: In many flocks, the most serious death losses incurred are as a result of prolapses or blow-outs. While there are indications that in some strains of chickens the losses from blow-outs are greater than in the case with other strains, this trouble seems to be increased when heavy corn feeding is practiced. If a scratch feed containing not more than 50 per cent corn is fed, less blow-out trouble is usually experienced. The feeding of whole oats at the rate of 15 to 20 per cent of the scratch feed aids materially in preventing blow-out trouble. The feeding of some oats helps prevent feather picking in laying flocks in many cases.

Soy Beans for Grazing. To be sure of plenty green feed for the growing pullets during late spring and summer, plant some soybeans as soon as danger of frost is over. Soy Beans is one of the safest green feed crops for a hot, dry summer, when other green feeds get tough during hot dry weather, soybean leaves remain tender and palatable. It is more satisfactory to plant the beans in rows rather

Grady Neal Johnson Discharged From Navy

Grady Neal Johnson, Seaman first class, USNR, of Waynesville, R.F.D. No. 1, was among a group receiving discharges from the Navy at the U. S. Naval Personnel Separation Center at Charleston.

Seaman Johnson entered the navy in November, 1944, and served 14 months on sea duty.

Chick Feeding Practices. Many poultry raisers have found it advisable to feed the baby chicks on nothing but baby chick scratch grain the first two days. This practice helps to prevent a pasting-up condition in the chicks. After the first two days the grain should be withheld and mash only fed. If the grain feeding is continued after the first two days, the growth of the chicks will be retarded and vitamin and mineral deficiency diseases may show up. If a starting mash or a starting and growing mash is fed, do not feed grain after the first two days until the chicks reach the age of five or six weeks. Then feed only what grain the chicks will clean up late each afternoon until the pullets are 12 to 14 weeks old and out on range, at which time, half mash and half grain may be fed. If the chicks are being raised for broilers and a broiler mash is used, do not feed grain until the last three weeks before the broilers are sold.

Keep Eggs Cool: An egg becomes damaged as much in three days in 98° temperature, as in 65 days in the home refrigerator. So keep the eggs cool while on the farm, in a basement, cellar, or an insulated room. Remove the males and produce infertile eggs as they keep much longer than fertile eggs. Cull closely, prevent feed waste, and keep feeding the layers.

egg prices will soon be going up. Preserve some eggs. See your Home Agent for instructions.

Mary Lee Alley Graduates From Duke Hospital

Miss Mary Lee Alley, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Hall Alley, of Durham and F. E. Alley, of Washington, and granddaughter of Judge and Mrs. Felix Alley, of Waynesville, was recently graduated from the Duke Hospital School of Nursing. She has been named as assistant head nurse on one of the medical floors of the Duke Hospital. Miss Alley attended Montreat Junior college, and the Woman's college of the University of North Carolina. She is now doing part time work at Duke University, where she plans to graduate.

Jack Sanford, S 1/c, Discharged From Navy

Jack Sanford, seaman first class, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sanford, of the Iron Duff section of the county has received his discharge from the navy. He entered the service in October, 1943, and at the time of his discharge had completed a period of duty aboard a transport.

He is entitled to wear the American Defense ribbon, the Philippine Liberation medal, with two battle stars, the Asiatic-Pacific Theater ribbon with three battle stars, the Victory medal and Good Conduct medal.

REAL TROUBLE

Savannah, Ga. — Jacob Golden put his entire life's savings into a small store and home. Both recently burned, 15 minutes after his insurance policy had lapsed. In the house were funds of a rural church entrusted to Golden—they also burned. During the fire, he remembered that he had cached $30 in a pair of shoes under a bed. A neighbor retrieved the shoes but in the excitement of the fire, they were lost. The fire spread, consuming his garage, a chicken house and the adjacent home of his daughter.
