Has Brief Reunion

FLYING across the Atlantic in an attempt to reach the bedside of her dying husband, Mrs. Doris Grigsby (above), won the race, but only in time to see her husband die a half hour after her arrival at Camp Kilmer, N. J. The husband, Sgt. Orvin Grigsby of Fortuna, Calif., a tubercular sufferer was near death when his English bride was informed of his condition. (International)

Year-Round State Fair Being Sought

A movement which may result in a year-round exhibit of the State's resources began here with a meeting of the Board of Agriculture with agricultural leaders interested in the State fair.

The meeting was called by Governor Cherry, at whose suggestion the group decided upon the appointment of an executive committee to investigate the project. Agriculture Commissioner W. Kerr Scott was named chairman of the committee, and he will appoint the other members.

Cherry spoke in favor of the proposal, pointing out that it must be achieved over a period of years, with the present State fair installations as a nucleus.

U. B. Blalock, of Wadesboro, who was chairman of the public buildings committee in the 1945 House of Representatives, said a recommendation for new State fair buildings would be made in the next General Assembly.

Dr. J. S. Norton, of Shelby, State fair manager, said the fair, the first since 1941, would definitely be held this year. The time of the exposition, October 14-19, had already been set. Facilities are not adequate, he said, but "we'll do the best we can."

Under the plan discussed, the fairgrounds would be used the year-round to house exhibits of the State's industries, agriculture, minerals, etc. Sentiment was also expressed for new buildings to house cattle and to provide exhibitors with living and eating quarters.

New buildings are needed, it was said, to realize the goal of making the fair's facilities adequate for exhibits from throughout the State.

UNEMPLOYMENT—Col. A. L. Fletcher is retiring as chairman of the Unemployment Compensation Commission... and Governor Cherry has offered this position to at least two rather prominent North Carolinians, but they turned it down. Fuller Martin has been named acting chairman—but the job isn't yet considered filled... and there was a hint last week that the place might go to John Harden, Cherry's secretary, who knows very little about unemployment, being a good newspaperman, but might be interested in the compensation.

Fletcher is taking the Veterans Administration job... at reduced compensation... that Cale Burgess, Raleigh attorney and dry leader, had held for less than a year. Nobody seems to know why Burgess quit.

EXCHANGE—Rivers Johnson of Warsaw, veteran legislator and a wetter-than-wet, bested bone-dry Josephus Daniels in an exchange of remarks before the platform committee at the Democratic Convention last week.

EXCHANGE—Rivers Johnson of Warsaw, veteran legislator and a wetter-than-wet, bested bone-dry Josephus Daniels in an exchange of remarks before the platform committee at the Democratic Convention last week. Johnson told Daniels point-blank that he is against a State referendum on whiskey... that he would vote against it in the next Legislature.

Daniels asked Johnson if he didn't think liquor should be looked at on a Statewide basis... like roads and schools. Well, Johnson came back, roads and schools improvements were never put to a State vote, why should whiskey be? Johnson replied that he is a follower of Wilsonian democracy: local rights and son on... If Daniels was able to reply to Johnson's position, his answers was smothered in further alcoholic conversation.

But here is what keeps the wets scared to death: 80 per cent of this State's white population, the voting strength, lies west of Raleigh... and there isn't an ABC store west of Durham.
