Wayside Lodge Gives Dinner On Formal Opening

The formal opening of Wayside Lodge was observed by an open house with a star dinner given by D. Ballew, one of the new owners, on Monday evening.

The dinner was served in the newly decorated dining rooms and the menu consisted of fried chicken, southern style, baked ham and all the dishes that usually accompany these meals, served with pre-war lavishness.

The popular tourist hotel, which has been decorated from the first to the third floor was thrown open for the evening and the guests inspected the freshly done over rooms.

The Wayside Lodge, which was formerly owned by Mrs. R. H. Blackwell, was bought last December by D. Ballew and W. D. Pope, of Atlanta. Mr. and Mrs. Ballew have arrived and plan to assume active management of the place assisted by Mrs. Bester Queen.

The guest list included a number of the business and civic leaders of the community.

State Guard To Hold Summer Camp In Virginia

The North Carolina State Guard will hold their annual summer encampment this year at Camp Pendleton, Va., instead of Fort Bragg, as has been the custom for many years, according to an announcement by the Adjutant General, it was learned this week from Col. J. Harden Howell, commander of the Second N. C. State Regiment.

Camp Pendleton is located near Virginia Beach and will offer many recreational features for the men in camp.

There are at present a number of vacancies in the local State Guard unit, and volunteers are now urged to join the company. Those who join the group now will be eligible to attend the summer encampment of the guard at the Virginia camp sometime in August.

Morning Star 4-H Club Raises Money For Hut At Camp

The Morning Star 4-H club in Beaverdam Township has raised $75.00 for assisting in the erection of a hut for 4-H club members to use at the 4-H club camp near the State Test farm, it was learned this week from the office of the county farm agents.

The Morning Star club is one of the youngest 4-H groups in the county, but a great deal has been accomplished by the members since the work was organized.

H. R. Niswonger Specialist Visits Farms

H. R. Niswonger, Extension Horticulture specialist from State College, Raleigh, spent Wednesday in the county working with the county farm agents in horticulture work.

The specialist and the county agents visited several farms where the owners are interested in horticulture work, including those of phone company, stated that they had incorporated rural telephone service and that when material could be obtained the program would be extended, as the number of consumers was greatly on the increase.

Wednesday evening a banquet was held in the coffee shop of the Hotel Gordon with R. E. Sheffield, manager of the Haywood Electric Membership Cooperative, and host for the meeting, presiding, Chas. E. Ray, well known business man and civic leader, was the principal speaker.

On Friday morning reports were given by the following committees: Finance, Insurance, Wage Stabilization, Legislative, and other groups, which was followed by a talk by Gwyn B. Price, chairman of the North Carolina Electrification Authority.

Mr. Price outlined the plans for extension of electric service on every farm home in the state, and urged that the cooperatives work toward bringing about a better understanding and cooperation with both members and prospective members.

Others taking part on the afternoon program yesterday were: Cecil Viverette, chairman of the safety and job training division; W. J. Reidout, agricultural engineering specialist, of State College extension service; and William Holding, regional attorney.

The meeting adjourned around 4:00 o'clock yesterday after one of the most successful conferences held since the forming of the service in the state, according to those present.

Seventy Sheep Growers Attend Shearing School

Around seventy interested sheep breeders in Haywood county attended the Sheep Shearing school which was held on the Fred Mann farm in Beaverdam township on Tuesday, according to Wayne Corpening, county farm agent.

The school which demonstrated the proper and easier way of shearing wool and also caring for the clip after, was conducted by Howard Stamey, extension animal husbandry specialist, of State College, and E. A. Warner of the Sunbeam Corporation.

Among those attending with the sheep growers were 4-H club members and FFA boys from the Crabtree area of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Francis, of Francis Cove, Charles Edwards of Lake Junaluska, Bob McCracken of Pigeon Gap, and the State Test farm and others.

An effort is being made to get more small fruit and vegetables grown on farms for home consumption and for sale on the local markets, according to Wayne Corpening, county farm agent.
