

Mrs. R. J. Reynolds Seeking A Divorce

Wife Of Multi-Millionaire Says Former Mayor Of Winston-Salem Wants To Marry Again

WINSTON-SALEM — Elizabeth Dillard Reynolds has filed a suit in superior court against Richard Joshua Reynolds, former mayor of Winston-Salem and son of the Reynolds tobacco family, for separate maintenance and "absolute and unrestricted custody" of their four minor children.

In the complaint, Mrs. Reynolds alleges that the defendant, an officer in the navy until last fall, during the last eight months had "deliberately and wittily adorted and pursued a course of action designed and intended to embarrass and humiliate the plaintiff and to render her condition intolerable and her life burdensome."

She alleges that Reynolds is "reasonably worth in excess of $20 million and that in the past he had established and maintained an expensive standard of living for the family at an annual cost of "not less than $100,000." She further claimed that he is "lawfully required to support and maintain her and their said children according to his financial ability and station in life and in the manner he had heretofore provided and to which they had been accustomed."

Mrs. Reynolds' suit asks that the defendant "provide a reasonable subsistence for her and to secure to her so much of his income and estate as may be proper, according to his station in life, his financial condition and circumstances and to pay her reasonable counsel fees."

"2" provide and secure to her, for the benefit of the four minor children of their marriage, an amount from his estate or earnings, or both, reasonably necessary for the maintenance, support and education of said children during their minority."

"3" "absolute and unrestricted custody of the children."

In the detailed complaint, Mrs. Reynolds recounts that she and Reynolds were married January 1, 1933, and that that union four children were born: Richard Joshua, III, John Dillard, Zachary Taylor and William Neal Reynolds. She further sets forth that the defendant volunteered for service in the navy in 1942 and from that time until he went overseas in the fall of 1944, she and the children were with him at some of his posts of duty in the United States.

She states that Reynolds during his overseas duty had corresponded with her and had given no implication that there was any difference in their relations. He returned to the United States in September, 1945, she alleges, and was in this country two weeks before he communicated with her.

The plaintiff states in specific instances how on a number of occasions since that time, Reynolds had informed her personally and by telephone that he was going to get a divorce and was going to marry another woman. She states that it had been widely publicized by radio and press that Reynolds intended to divorce her.

SKUNK KNOWS IT'S ALL NON-SCENTS

UNAWARE OF THE FACT that the skunk has been deodorized, a baby bear uses good sense by taking to the tall timber. One of three cubs owned by Clayton Seagears, director of the Division of Conservation Education at Delmar, N. Court Allows Damages As Low Flying Planes Worry Farmer And Chicks

WASHINGTON — The Supreme court held this week that if low flying planes prevented enjoyment or use of property it would be virtually the same as moving in and taking over.

The court called for more information about the loss claimed by Thomas Lee Causby, whose farm is near the Greensboro-High Point, N. C., airport.

Causby and his wife won a $2,000 award in the U. S. court of claims contending planes from the airport made their home uninhabitable and caused them to abandon the chicken trade, their means of livelihood.

Justice Douglas said in a 5-2 decision that if the farmer's property could not be used for any purpose because of the flights "their loss would be complete . . . as if the United States had entered upon the surface of the land and taken exclusive possession of it."

The Causbys said roaring planes flew so low they caused old leaves to fly off trees in their yard; the noise, night-flying lights and fear of accidents caused fright, nervousness, and frequent loss of sleep. They cited four flying accidents near their farm, in one of which a plane crashed into a house and killed five persons.

As many as 10 chickens a day were killed, they said, by flying against walls because of fright at the planes. Hens stopped laying, they said.

Douglas ruled that the court of claims had failed to make an accurate determination of the exact damage caused to the farm property, and also whether the asserted damage was permanent.
