New England Sunday Dinner By BETSY NEWMAN

IF ON Saturday night you cook a New England dinner, you can reheat it or serve the meat sliced cold for Sunday with mashed brown potatoes and a fresh vegetable, salad and dessert. You girls who are new to this business of keeping house, start by keeping your Sundays as free from work as possible. If hubby insists upon a freshly cooked hot Sunday dinner, instead of the New England one, heat your oven at breakfast time, put in meat and, when suitable temperature is reached, roast for an hour or so.

Wash and cover meat with boiling water (if fresh brisket is used, add 1 1/2 tbs. salt to cooking water). Simmer slowly in covered kettle 3 to 5 hours, or until meat is tender. About 25 mins. before the meat is done add cabbage, onions and carrots. You can cook the potatoes with the rest if you wish, or separately. The beets should be cooked separately. Serve the meat on a large platter.

Turn off when you go to church, and when you come home you can roast it until it is done, add potatoes to the pan, cook, add a frozen vegetable, whip up a salad, and serve with a bought dessert.
